REFEREES & COMMISSIONERS 130

Dear Friends,

On behalf of FIBA Europe, it is my pleasure to welcome you back to Czech Republic for Europe's premier women's basketball competition: FIBA EuroBasket Women 2017.

I say welcome back because the Czech Republic is a nation synonymous with hosting top-level women's basketball events, having previously welcomed the competition in 1995, as well as also inviting the world's best for the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup in 2010.

For this event, for the first-time ever, Qualifier windows were introduced, seeing national team games played across three windows during the domestic season. Bringing more meaningful national team games to our federations proved to be an immense success, with fans showing their gratitude by turning out in remarkable numbers. Credit should go to all federations who participated in the Qualifiers for the wonderful organization of the games.

I am also excited by the "Adopt Your Team" project developed by the Local Organizing Committee (LOC) to encourage more young people to join in this celebration of basketball. The project, open to all schools in the Czech Republic, will see children from different schools coming to the arena to support the team of their choice. With FIBA's strong emphasis on grassroots basketball, such enterprises are encouraged to take top-level basketball to the next generation of stars.

However, this is only one example of the wonderful work being done by the LOC in the organization of FIBA EuroBasket Women 2017, and big congratulations should be given to them for the tireless hours of work that have gone into making this event the success that I am sure it will be.

All the very best to all competitors – just making it this far is already a major accomplishment, but there are bigger goals to be reached yet. I will be watching on with great anticipation to see who will be crowned champions on June 25.

Best regards,

Turgay Demirel
FIBA Europe President

Dear Friends of Basketball,

Welcome to FIBA EuroBasket Women 2017, the tournament which heralds in another summer of FIBA European basketball.

Over the next 10 days we are going to bear witness to drama, upsets, tears and glory as the best female players on the European continent enter the battle to be crowned European champions.

If there is one thing we can be certain of, it is to expect the unexpected. This tournament has not had back-to-back champions since the Soviet Union in 1991, with eight different nations crowned champions in the 12 editions that have since passed.

Whilst the short-term goal is to be crowned European champions on June 25, there is also a longer-term aim for all competing sides to keep in mind: Qualifying to play in the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup, alongside hosts Spain, in 2018, with five other European nations having the opportunity to be back on the world stage next summer.

On behalf of FIBA, I wish to send a heartfelt thank you to the Czech organizers of this tournament, whom I am confident have taken every possible measure to deliver what will be a world-class event. Best of luck to all those competing in what is set to be an exhilarating 10 days of basketball.

Sincerely,

Kamil Novak
FIBA Executive Director Europe

HRADEC
KRALOVE

Hradec Kralove is a university city with a population of 92,808. Founded in 1225, it is one of the oldest Czech cities. In recent years, Hradec Kralove has become a household name for national and international music festivals.

The Salon of the Republic, the open-air textbook of architecture and the City of Czech Queens are just some of the attributes which characterize today's university city with a population of almost 100,000, situated amidst the greenery at the confluence of the Rivers Elbe and Orlice.

Hradec acquired town rights in 1225 from Ottokar I, King of Bohemia, which makes it one of the oldest-known Czech towns. The history of Hradec Kralove is reflected in countless architectural gems, which can still be found here, such as the Gothic Holy Spirit Cathedral on the Large Square, the Renaissance White Tower, the Baroque Episcopal Residence as well as the Plague Column of the Virgin Mary and the Church of the Assumption of the Virgin. Until the mid-19th century the city was used as a military stronghold. This concept was abolished after the Battle near Hradec Kralove in 1866, resulting in the actual freeing up of space for the Golden Era of Hradec Kralove architecture of the early 20th century. Thanks particularly to the constructions designed by the architects Gocar and Kotera, but also owing to the social life of the city, this period is referred to as the Salon of the Republic.

Distinctive architectural projects of the present day include the construction of the Research Library, the seat of the Hradec Kralove Regional Office, the modern complex of the City Public Transport Terminal, Flosna Swimming Grounds, the Library of the City of Hradec Kralove and the footbridge for pedestrians and cyclists across the Orlice River as well as the reconstruction of the Southern Terraces, Elbe River Bank, Simek's Park and the White Tower.

The metropolis offers a wide range of options for cultural and social enjoyment, for example the excellent Klicpera Theatre along with the BioCentral Art Cinema, the world-renowned Drak Theatre, the Philharmonic Orchestra, Adalbertinum Cultural and Entertainment Centre and the Aldis Congress Centre. Thousands of people throughout the whole of Europe come to witness the festivities commemorating the 1866 Battle near Hradec Kralove. Visitors are also attracted to the city thanks to Queen Elizabeth's Festival as well as the Hradec Kralove Embankment Series; the international theatrical festival, "Jazz Goes to Town"; CIAF international aviation show; and many other social, cultural and sporting events, which represent some of the important entries in the Calendaria Regina.

PRAGUE

Prague is the capital and largest city in Czech Republic with a population of 1,267,449. Founded in approximately 880, it is one of the oldest and best-preserved cities in Europe, being particularly famous for its architecture and cultural attractions. Prague's historic center has been included in the UNESCO list of World Heritage Sites since 1992.

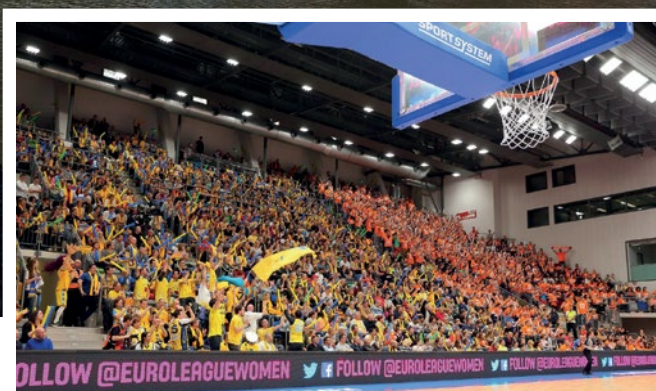

Prague, the historical pearl of Europe, is considered one of the most beautiful cities in the world. It has always played an important role in the history of Czech Republic (formerly Bohemia) and of Europe.

Since the Middle Ages, Prague's beauty has been described with expressions such as "golden", "hundred-spired" and "the crown of the world".

The unique character of the city is also partly a consequence of its natural environment. Similarly, to Rome, which was built on seven hills, Prague was built on nine, along the Vltava River, which flows through the city for 31km and forms a perfect unity with the city.

The dominant features of the city's architecture are reflected in the river: the towers, the church spires and cupolas as well as palaces and town houses, along with the greenery of gardens, parks and islands.

The history of the city began with the founding of Prague Castle in the 9th century. At the time of the founding of the Old Town of Prague at the start of the 13th century, the Romanesque style began to be replaced by Gothic flavor. The oldest structure in this style is the Convent of St Agnes of Bohemia (or the Old-New Synagogue), while St Vitus Cathedral, Charles Bridge, the Church of Our Lady before Tyn are examples of this style's prime.

The greatest flourishing of the Czech state occurred at that time, which will eternally relate to the monarch Charles IV, who founded the famous Charles University in 1348, the first university in Central Europe.

Nowadays, Prague is an important European city that attracts visitors not only by the abundance of architectural gems that generations of ancestors have left behind, but also as it is a place where cultural, social and political events of international importance are held as well as being a popular destination for trade fairs and congresses.

HOW TO QUALIFY

FIBA WOMEN'S BASKETBALL WORLD CUP 2018

The FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup, known from 1953 to 2014 as the FIBA World Championship for Women, is the biggest international women's basketball competition and sees the world's best teams vying to lift the coveted Raposo Trophy.

The inaugural FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup took place in Chile in 1953 with the USA emerging as the first champions after beating the host nation in the Final.

Altogether, USA have triumphed in nine of the 17 editions of the competition to date, with the Soviet Union accounting for a further six titles, while Australia and Brazil have won one each.

The 18th edition of FIBA's flagship women's event will take place in Spain from September 22-30 2018, with the host cities to be revealed in June 2017.

It will bring together the 16 best teams from across FIBA's four regions - Africa, Americas, Asia and Europe. Whilst defending champions USA and hosts Spain have already booked their place, the remaining 14 teams will be decided in the summer of 2017 through the Women's Continental Cups.

Five European teams will punch their ticket via FIBA EuroBasket Women 2017. Should Spain finish amongst the top five teams, the sixth-placed team will also secure a spot.

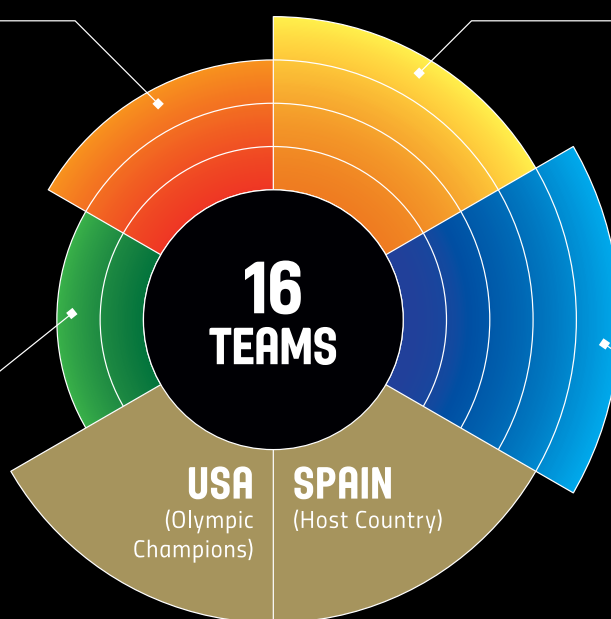

The field will be completed by the top three teams from the FIBA Women's AmeriCup (August 7-13); the two finalists from the FIBA Women's AfroBasket (August 18-27); as well as the first four teams from the FIBA Women's Asia Cup (July 23-29), which will see teams from Oceania and Asia compete together for the first time ever.

CZECH REPUBLIC

HOPING HOME COMFORTS AND SUPPORT WILL HELP THEM SHINE

As with any host of a major tournament, Czech Republic are liable to either freeze and buckle under the weight of expectation, or harness the pride and national passion cascading around the arenas to energize a positive campaign.

Host nations rarely fall somewhere in between, yet this might be the case with Czech Republic, whose hopes have been boosted immeasurably with the introduction of their first high-profile naturalized player in Kia Vaughn, but look worryingly short of quality in the backcourt.

That makes the Czechs something of an unknown quantity as they crave a return to their former status as one of the top women's basketball nations in the world.

Landing the EuroLeague Women 2015 Final Four MVP in the shape of Vaughn is a major coup, as she brings with her WNBA quality and can be a colossus on defense. She also knows the players and country well, having spent several years starring for ZVVZ USK Prague.

Throw in the fact that the hugely experienced Petra Kulichova is set to return to major tournament action for the first time since the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup three years ago, you can confidently say that, backed by the fighting spirit of a warrior in the form of Ilona Burgrova and the exciting athleticism and transition of Alena Hanusova, the forward line-up looks well-stocked.

Not that Kulichova is even the standout returnee. That crown goes to shooting ace Katerina Elhotova, who has barely played in the past 12 months after taking maternity leave, but got back on the floor back in March – right on schedule.

Whether she is too under-cooked or revels in the freshness of a lengthy rest away from the game remains to be seen. Having signed at Minnesota Lynx last year, this only goes to further underline her brilliant offensive powers which have graced EuroLeague Women and the international game for a decade.

However, the Achilles heel of Czech Republic in recent years remains. They have never recovered from losing backcourt players such as Hana Horakova, Eva Viteckova and Veronika Bortelova. Even if Elhotova can pick up some of the scoring slack which the first two provided, the lack of a premier play-maker stands out prominently and they need somebody to emerge and come out of the pack to show they can cut it on the big stage. This will possibly define their tournament.

The modern era has seen Czech Republic criticized for being too traditional in their approach and style - too methodical, predictable and not athletic enough. While playing a pick-and-roll game and reverting to type will get them so far, have they got the creative ability away from the dribble to make things happen outside of their forward presence and shooters on the wing?

Trying to find the right blend and meeting the hopes of a nation is head coach Ivan Benes who has been promoted from assistant and heads into his first major tournament in the hot-seat.

Czech Republic missed out on the Quarter-Finals last time, something that can only be considered 'par-score' this time around. Anything less and you can file it as a disappointment, while pushing for the podium or more likely challenging for a place at the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup 2018 would be a triumph.

An excited nation awaits.

COACH

IVAN BENES

Nationality: Czech
Date of Birth: 17/02/60
Place of Birth: Prague
Team 2016-17: ZVVZ USK Prague (Assistant Coach)
Club Career: USK Prague (Czech Republic-ZBL, 1999-01, 2012-13); Strakonice (Czech Republic-ZBL, 2013-15)
International career: Czech Republic Women (Head Coach, 2015-)

An accomplished player earlier in his career, Benes represented Sparta Prague in European club competition. In terms of his coaching career, he has occasionally found himself in the head coaching position at ZVVZ USK Prague and Strakonice for example, but like last season, is better known as an assistant. Indeed, it has been the same at international level, fulfilling the role as the trusted lieutenant of the long-serving Lubor Blazek, his predecessor. While there is an issue of Benes having not been the main man at a major tournament previously, he has plenty of knowledge of the environment as a number two on the coaching staff and has worked with most of the players already - many also at club level. Therefore, Czech Republic should be in safe hands.

KATERINA ELHOTOVA

Height: 1.80
Position: Shooting Guard
Date of Birth: 14/10/89
Place of Birth: Prague
Team 2016-17: ZVVZ USK Prague (Czech Republic-ZBL)
Career: ZVVZ USK Prague (Czech Republic-ZBL, 2006-17)
Instagram: kaca.elhotova

Still only 27-years-old and yet bidding to compete in her sixth Final Round, the potential inclusion of the shooting guard after maternity leave would be an enormous boost. After not playing club basketball last season because of her family commitments, she has been locked in a race against time to get back to her brilliant best which previously saw her sign with WNBA franchise Minnesota Lynx. She has spent her entire career competing in EuroLeague Women at ZVVZ USK Prague and stepping out with the national team at major tournaments. There are few deadlier shooters in the women's game and if she gets hot, she will take the game away from opponents in a flash. She was the leading scorer on the Czech roster two years ago in Romania and Hungary. Meanwhile, off the court, Elhotova has gained a lot of support and praise for bravely opening her heart to expose the domestic abuse she has had to endure.

The naturalization of the powerhouse center has transformed the prospects of the hosts making an impact in the competition, since Vaughn offers EuroLeague Women and WNBA quality under the basket. A defensive colossus when required, a beast on the boards and packing an offensive punch which will leave many opponents rocking on the back foot, the 30-year-old gives Czech Republic the option of being more aggressive than ever before inside. She brings more than the traditional pick-and-roll concepts of Czech basketball and knows the country well after spending a major chapter of her career with ZVVZ USK Prague. Additionally, she is a legend in the Czech capital after she famously led USK Prague to their maiden EuroLeague Women title in 2015, being crowned MVP on a memorable night.

Ever since she made it onto the Czech Republic roster for the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup on home soil, Burgrova has held onto her peg in the locker room. A popular character on and off the floor, she brings a warrior spirit in the paint and can regularly be seen fighting for position, loose balls and generally setting the tone at both ends of the court with her energetic and aggressive stance. One look at the minutes she has been handed in the past seven years and you can appreciate just how important she is as a leader. A EuroLeague Women champion with ZVVZ USK Prague, 2015 was certainly a great year for the forward, who then proceeded to shoot more than 50% from the field in the Final Round. Her defensive tenacity also led to her grabbing more steals than anyone else. Burgrova is also very much the face of Final Round promotion in Hradec Kralove - she is on billboards and even on the side and back of buses. She also likes to help others and is active in multiple charitable projects.

Now a key member of the starting five for her country, the last couple of years have seen Hanusova elevated in prominence after she made great strides at club level with Prague in helping them to win EuroLeague Women two years ago. That resulted in the forward playing more minutes than anyone else at the Final Round in Hungary and Romania which underlines her new-found responsibilities. She has excellent technical skills, is a smooth free-throw shooter and can be unstoppable on the fast-break as she gets out in transition well. You might also seriously be left regretting it if you leave her open from deep. The big question is whether she could become the first Czech women's player to dunk in a game - something she does with regularity in practices.

Now in her third season with powerhouse side ZVVZ USK Prague where she was crowned a EuroLeague Women winner, practicing and playing alongside so many talented players has sharpened Vyoralova, as well as giving her a more hardened edge. The question mark remains over her head though when it comes to the national team and whether she is now able to command more minutes and make the breakthrough many had hoped when she was a stellar youth player. Although she has featured at major tournaments, her role has not been expansive. But, she has had an eye-catching season in the ZBL and has been reliable in EuroLeague Women. While she is not as athletic or quick as some other players, she is strong physically, has a nice basketball brain and can shoot comfortably from most spots on the floor. She hails from a basketball family with her father Vladimir Vyoral a silver medalist from EuroBasket 1985, while her brother Tomas Vyoral plays for BK Decin.

Best known for the way she exploded into life at the London Olympics five years ago with a succession of dynamic performances which made everyone sit up and take notice of her talent, Stejskalova is still capable of doing special things. While injuries have curtailed her during the last few seasons, she remains an 'X-Factor' player on the wing. If she can prove herself defensively and stick to those assignments given to her, the offensive side of her game is a 'no-brainer', given her multi-faceted skill-set and most notably, her shooting and dribbling. Having played for the past two years in Liga Femenina, she is looking to re-discover the magic of 2012 with the national team and is likely to be a go-to option off the bench - although has also started regularly in the past. She is also known for bringing a positive mood and is always smiling and laughing around the locker room.

No stranger to wearing a Czech Republic vest having represented her country when younger at the FIBA U19 Women's World Championship and at two editions of the World University Games, a senior debut might be about to happen after raising her game at club level. Having impressed in the ZBL in the last couple of years at VS Prague by averaging double-digits, she has continued her rich scoring form in her first season outside of her homeland. So much so, the guard top-scored for Rotenburg in a super individual campaign. Quick to the basket, a nice finisher and carrying that three-point threat, she is definitely in the mix to make the final cut.

While there has been an inevitability about Elhotova having to operate in the shadow of her older sister Katerina, she could be about to finally join her sibling at a major tournament. That would be special for both players and it could be possible because since moving alongside each other at ZVVZ USK Prague, the small forward has flourished and shown she can produce at the higher level. While her court time has not been huge in EuroLeague Women, Elhotova has done the simple things very well and has taken her opportunity in the ZBL where she has been given an expanded role. She has learned how to contribute in many different areas and that could make her a perfect wing option off the bench for coach Benes who has been involved in her development at club level. She is also now the proud aunt of her sister's child and is supporting her sibling through the early days of motherhood.

It was a whirlwind introduction to the senior set-up for Bartakova after she was given the chance to shine at the Olympic Qualifying Tournament five years ago. Managing to hold on to her place for the London 2012 Games, she only played in a couple of contests but grabbed eight points against Angola and a basket against gold medal winners, USA. Many thought she would cement her place in the team but was omitted for the next two editions of FIBA EuroBasket Women and also the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup 2014. Five years after her fairytale summer in the British capital, she could be ready to make a belated return to major tournament action having had a nice couple of seasons with Basketball Nymburk - both domestically and also in EuroCup Women. A well known hip-hop music fan, Bartakova will be hoping Hradec Kralove is more kind to her in 2017 as she broke her wrist in the city last summer during a friendly tournament.

Handed a somewhat shock place on the roster at the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup 2014, Sedlakova showed glimpses to suggest that she could be an option to pull the strings again after missing out on the last edition of the Final Round. During the team's preparation and exhibition games last summer, she was actually the oldest player on the roster of a young side which suggests a return to the mix and a FIBA EuroBasket Women debut. She made some decisive contributions, showcasing her nice passing skills. A good rebounder for her size, she has other upsides, although with a limited three-point game, she is unlikely to score heavily as was demonstrated during a modest youth career in Czech colors. She is a good creator and is always willing to put her body on the line defensively. So far, she has spent her entire career in Brno - albeit switching clubs last year.

The expected return of the towering Kulichova is a major boost for Czech Republic, with the center having had a three-year sabbatical from national team colors. A triple Olympian and ready for a sixth FIBA EuroBasket Women Final Round appearance having won the title back in 2005, there is nobody more experienced on the roster of the hosts. Her matchup capabilities defensively are hugely important and her shot-blocking ability is up there with the best. She is a good rebounder and if she can stay out of foul trouble which has occasionally slowed her down, she could offer a superb rotation with Kia Vaughn under the hoop, or even an option of 'Twin Towers'. Kulichova has played for the last three years in the highly-rated Turkish League, so has been playing against quality opposition on a weekly basis since disappearing from the international game.

Even if the 21-year-old doesn't have any senior team experience, many within the Czech women's game believe she might grab a spot on the end of the bench after establishing herself as a leader with Valosun Brno. She showed a lot of promise at youth level in a Czech jersey and her ability to contribute in so many different facets of the game remains her main strength. With Czech Republic having limited options in the backcourt, there is a wholly unexpected and glorious opportunity for Pudlakova to convince coach Benes that she can help solve a headache. She is someone who can not only shoot the ball, but show composure and handle herself at the point guard position when required. Such flexibility will be appealing and if she has a good camp and shines in the preparation games, then she may well find herself sat on the end of the bench and ready to provide valuable backup. Only her lack of senior minutes previously and having not played for a leading Czech team in European club competitions goes against her and she is therefore an unknown quantity at the elite level.

If Czech Republic want to make a bold statement about building for the future and looking to the emerging generation then it would come with the inclusion of the highly-talented and promising wing star. Although she has not even been particularly prolific at youth level for her country, her skill-set and potential for growth is well known. And, having cut her teeth at Strakonice, the past 12 months have been transformational for the rising star. That is because she got a major move to ZVZ USK Prague and even if it meant being buried on the bench, working alongside a host of legends in practice each day from head coach Natalia Hejkova and players like Sonja Petrovic and Laia Palau will have given her a wealth of smarts and confidence. She has also benefited from being alongside Coach Benes who is an assistant with the champions and even if she misses the cut this time around, circle her name on your future watch-lists.

HUNGARY

HEADING INTO THE UNKNOWN

Pre-tournament opinions on Hungary seem to vary wildly, since the naturalization of Courtney Vandersloot offers much positivity, but a seemingly limited frontcourt is still cause for caution.

Taking over in the naturalized spot from her Chicago Sky teammate, Alexandria Quigley, the impact of Vandersloot was instant as Hungary took a brilliant win in the derby with Slovak Republic during the Qualifiers to punch their ticket back to the Final Round.

The playmaker has had a sensational year with Yakin Dogu Universitesi, helping them scoop domestic silverware and a maiden EuroCup Women title off the back of her blistering performances. If she gets anywhere near that level in a Hungarian vest, her adopted country will have an immeasurable backcourt edge.

Another reason to suggest Hungary might be able to be highly competitive is that their roster have all been playing in either EuroLeague Women or EuroCup Women during 2016-17 and that cannot be discounted.

The roster could include a trio of VBW CEKK Cegled players. The EuroCup Women newcomers were the talk of the competition, with their spectacular rookie season underpinned by versatile forward duo Nora Nagy-Bujdosó and Szidonia Katona - along with renowned 3x3 player Dora Medgyessy.

They also have incredible know-how to call upon in the shape of combo guard Zsófia Fegyverneky, who has a decade of EuroLeague Women experience on her resume, while Dorina Zele brings athleticism and excitement whenever she is lurking on the wings.

The question is whether there will be far too much reliance on Tijana Krivacevic in the paint and whether the lack of depth in the frontcourt is going to end up hurting Hungary's prospects. As good as Krivacevic is, there is no denying that losing campaigners such as Dóra Horti will mean a potential void that is not adequately filled.

Any injuries or foul trouble for Krivacevic, and Hungary could be in deep trouble, which further underlines their reliance on her and emphasizes their short rotation in the paint.

Head coach Stefan Svitek was given the opportunity to redeem himself when Hungary flopped as co-hosts in 2015 with just one win to their name.

The playcaller has hit back with a first hefty punch in his defense by getting them back to another Final Round. Indeed, it is the first time that Hungary have completed a successful qualification campaign since 2008 when they booked a slot for FIBA EuroBasket Women 2009 in Latvia.

However, Svitek must now take his team up against Czech Republic, Ukraine and Spain in a tricky Group Phase schedule, which could feasibly have him back on the ropes again.

COACH

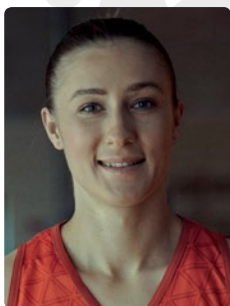

STEFAN SVITEK

Nationality: Slovakian
Date of Birth: 20/11/66
Place of Birth: Gelnica
Team 2016-17: Did not coach
Club Career: Kosice (Slovak Republic-Extraliga, 2007-12); MBK Ruzomberok (Slovak Republic-Extraliga, 2012-13); Wisla Can-Pack (Poland-BLK, 2013-15); Espirit Kosice (Slovak Republic-SBL, 2015-16); CCC Polkowice (Poland-BLK, 2016)
International Career: Hungary Women (Head Coach, 2011-12 & 2015-)

It's been a remarkable journey at the helm of the national team for Svitek who has experienced some real highs and lows. Now in his second spell at the helm having kept his post in the wake of the team's disappointing Group Phase exit as co-hosts at the last edition, the playcaller has since guided Hungary back to the Final Round as group winners in the Qualifiers - including derby wins against his native Slovak Republic. A former player of some distinction, the phlegmatic coach is known for his meticulous approach. He had an eventful club season when he was drafted in to take over CCC Polkowice in EuroLeague Women, but only lasted a few weeks in the hot-seat.

It seems as if Raksanyi has been around for an eternity - largely because she was a teenage phenomenon who had played a jaw-dropping six straight seasons of EuroLeague Women by the time she was 21. However, she did not receive a major tournament opportunity until the last edition of the Final Round and despite still only being 25-years-old, she has plenty to offer which means a second appearance at the event is likely. One of the main players at PEAC-Pecs, where she has spent the last three seasons, it isn't only her shooting prowess which has impressed, she has also shown she is taking her passing game to new levels with some terrific assists throughout the campaign. Raksanyi has a flair for languages and speaks Hungarian, English, Serbian and Spanish.

There is an incredible amount of responsibility resting on the shoulders of Krivacevic and not least because there is little depth in the Hungary camp when it comes to frontcourt quality. She will be the central figure in the paint and probably harvest more minutes than anybody else as she steps out at another Final Round - having been handed a debut back at the 2009 edition whilst still a teenager. With great mobility and some nice moves in the paint, including a quick-fire turnaround jump-shot, as well as a big appetite for offensive boards and put-backs, she will need to push for a double-double in most games. She has the quality to succeed in that goal, having been drafted to the WNBA by the Seattle Storm, and with plenty of EuroLeague Women court time on her resume. She got many of her skills under the basket from her father Dragoljub, a former basketball player himself. Krivacevic loves travelling and has had offers from modelling agencies.

The decision to hand Medgyessy the latest of debuts for her country during the Qualifiers was a popular choice as she had won the hearts of fans with her stunning performances last year at the FIBA 3X3 Europe Cup when she inspired Hungary to gold. Off the back of that, she was then the focal point for a sensational EuroCup Women debut season for VBW CEKK Cegled, with the playmaker one of the leaders for assists in the competition as they made a deep run beyond their wildest expectations. While her exceptional ball-handling and creative skills have been honed and expressed at 3x3 level, she looks set to show she can do it for her nation in the full version of the game and is heading for a Final Round debut at 30-years-old. The family of Medgyessy owns a popular hamburger place in her hometown of Debrecen.

Position: Power Forward

Instagram: zeledorina

The arrival of Zele on the international scene has been an absolute gift for Hungary who have struggled to find players who can mix it in the paint and defend under the basket. What the forward lacks in height, she makes up for with her athleticism, tenacity and fearless approach. Very effective at getting down the floor in double-quick time and also comfortable in popping out to the perimeter, she is a tough defensive assignment for her opponents. She initially rose to prominence in 2015 when she had a scorching season at ZTE NKK which resulted in her being handed a debut in the Final Round on home soil. Since then, she has played in EuroCup Women with PEAC-Pecs and should be even better equipped to shine this time around. Zele has a sweet tooth and loves eating desserts, while she is also known for going to bed earlier than anyone else.

Having just moved out of her teenage years, the rising star is one of the most talented players of an exciting generation for Hungary and tipped to become a leading senior player in coming years. With EuroLeague Women minutes now under her belt at Uniqa Sopron and having stepped out in most of the Qualifiers, Dubei looks a lock for her Final Round debut. After making the All-Star Five at the FIBA U17 Women's World Championship in 2014, there was a clamour for her to be included at FIBA EuroBasket Women 2015, but the previous edition came slightly too soon. With her elegant style on court which sees her glide effortlessly over the hardwood, the swingman's game is easy on the eye. But she also has a ruthless streak with the ball in her hands and can hurt opponents in a heartbeat. Dubei is a keen follower of fashion and is always watching the latest designs in the industry.

With more than 23 minutes per game to her name in EuroLeague Women last season at Uni Gyor, Simon fully appreciates the demands at the elite level. She will be looking to secure her second appearance at the Final Round after making her debut two years ago on home soil when she was only able to get a handful of minutes. An intelligent player who doesn't feel the need to be a volume shooter if there is a smarter option available, the guard is also a very diligent defensive player and will be used as a back-up off the bench.

A veteran campaigner who is held in great esteem in her homeland, having spent almost her entire career competing in EuroLeague Women and with the national team. Her leadership extends beyond the boundaries of the court and she is a role model for the next generation of young players now coming through. Skilled at handling the ball and creating, she can also slide over to the shooting guard spot, which means she spends a lot of time on the floor. Her combo capabilities and willingness to make clutch shots if needed, are complemented by her ability to defend well and use her 15 years of experience to ensure no opposing guards have a comfortable time. Fegyverneky is married to former men's national team player Gabor Denes.

One of the best players in European club basketball which was underlined emphatically during her blistering season with the hugely successful Yakin Dogu Universitesi that included EuroCup Women and Turkish Championship titles, the inclusion of the naturalized Vandersloot will be an incredible boost to Hungary. They had her on board for the last Qualifiers Window as she picked up the reins from her WNBA teammate Allie Quigley. She has excelled not only in EuroCup Women, but also in EuroLeague Women and very importantly, has an existing relationship with Coach Svitek from her club career at Wisla Can-Pack. She can score heavily, is an expert passer, will crash the boards brilliantly for her position and is a dream to have with the ball in her hands down the stretch of any game, meaning she will be a massive influence if she does suit up. The legendary John Stockton once compared her stylish game to being similar to one of ice-hockey's greatest in Wayne Gretzky.

While she has not yet been able to cement a Final Round berth previously in her career, a standout season with EuroCup Women fairytale side VBW CEKK Cegled means Katona could now be hard to ignore. She has also been very productive in the Hungarian League and her all-action style makes her an attractive proposition for any coach. Even if her three-point shooting is not up there with the best wing players around, it is consistent enough to trust and she has the added upside of finishing around the hoop, along with quick hands defensively. Away from the court, you had better watch out for her moves when the music is turned on as she is known as the 'Dancing Queen' in the Hungarian camp.

NORA NAGY-BUJDO SO

Height: 1.84
Position: Small Forward/Power Forward
Date of Birth: 18/11/85
Place of Birth: Budapest
Team 2016-17: VBW CEKK Cegled (Hungary-A)
Career: MiZo Pecs 2010 (Hungary-A, 2004-07); Tango Bourges Basket (France-LFB, 2007-09); MiZo Pecs 2010 (Hungary-A, 2009-11); Uni Gyor (Hungary-A, 2011-13); PEAC-Pecs (Hungary-A, 2013-14); Uniqa Sopron (Hungary-A, 2014-15); MTK Budapest (Hungary-A, 2015-16); VBW CEKK Cegled (Hungary-A, 2016-17)

The versatile forward has drifted in and out of the national team picture throughout her career and last played in a Final Round way back in 2009, but now looks set for a return to the big stage. Nagy-Bujdosó arrives in summer off the back of one of her best-ever club seasons after some extraordinary performances in EuroCup Women with surprise package VBW CEKK Cegled. A standout player at the start of her career when she played with the likes of Bourges and Mizo Pecs in EuroLeague Women, she is happy catching the ball outside and making triples or mixing it up inside and utilizing her quickness by burning opponents with spin moves in the paint. Nagy-Bujdosó is a big fan of dogs and especially the 'Boxer' breed.

BERNADETT HATAR

Height: 2.08
Position: Center
Date of Birth: 24/08/94

Team 2016-17: Uniqa Sopron (Hungary-A)
Career: Vasas Budapest (Hungary-A, 2013-15); Uniqa Sopron (Hungary-A, 2012-17)

Likely to be the tallest player not only on the Hungarian roster but also in the entire tournament, Hatar can provide a headache for her opponents because of her sheer height which makes her difficult to guard if she catches the ball close to the basket. While she isn't the most effective running the floor, her added work on the boards and ability to match up defensively with some towering opponents means she is an important player for Hungary. She was handed her debut at the Final Round two years ago by Coach Svitek and played in all six of Hungary's qualifiers for this edition so looks assured of her place in Czech Republic. Hatar is not only the tallest player, but also the one who came to the game the latest, since she didn't start playing seriously until she was 17-years-old.

Although Licskai is not a prolific scorer, she is efficient in most of the things that she does when she is on the floor and is also a nice free-throw shooter. While she impressed at youth level with her solid play and thirst for boards, she has never featured for the senior team at a major tournament. However, her reliability may be a big positive for Coach Svitek and he could be tempted to continue using her on the big stage after she was given more than 17 minutes per game in four of the qualification games. Team-focused and popular within the camp, it seems inevitable that she will get to show what she can do in a debut Final Round appearance. Licskai is known for her love of superfoods and extra healthy eating habits.

Career: Kanizsai Vadmacskák (Hungary-A, 2005-08); ZTE NKK (Hungary-A, 2008-09); MBK EuroLeasing Sopron (Hungary-A, 2009-11); ZTE NKK (Hungary-A, 2011-15); CMB Cargo Uni Győr (Hungary-A, 2015-17)

While she has flitted in and out of the national team picture and not yet played in a Final Round, Varga is a real option after two years at CMB Cargo Uni Győr, which saw her competing in EuroLeague Women for the first time in five years. She has shown she can contribute in multiple facets of the game and has particularly impressed with her passing vision from the wing. The forward was handed spots for a couple of the qualification games for her country and while she might not be one of the most prominent players, she does have a chance to make the end of the rotation and squeeze into one of the last spots on the roster. Varga is a big collector of shoes and bags, as well as being an honorary citizen of Tuskever.

Career: Aluivent Miskolc (Hungary-A, 2013-17)

Yet another player who is part of Hungary's exciting new crop of rising stars, the 20-year-old is knocking on the door for a Final Round debut. She played in four of the Qualifiers and even if she didn't get handed plentiful minutes, she has shown what she can do in a national vest at youth level. There have also been some nice performances in the Hungarian League, with many people impressed by her level of maturity considering she has largely been running things for Aluivent Miskolc from the point guard spot. She takes great care of the ball, has a more than respectable three-point shot and while there is a queue of playmakers in the senior team, she is a player on the up and will continue to push for a place this year and in tournaments to come.

Even if she only featured once in the Qualifiers, there is every chance that the form of Nagy during the last six months for ZTE in the Hungarian League and also during the preparation games leading up to the Final Round could see her elevated into the final 12. A guard who is very versatile and has a do-it-all approach, she isn't just a creator for others but a real team-player who is superb on the boards for her size. She has won a move to Aluivent Miskolc next year and has played in both EuroCup and EuroLeague Women during her career with Győr and Pecs and so fully understands the rigors of the top level. She was also a highly productive performer at youth level for her nation.

SPAIN

FAVORITES WILL BE GOING FOR GOLD

While they have been a top women's nation for quite some time, Spain used the previous Olympic cycle to elevate their status to a whole new level.

Much of that has been down to the revered Lucas Mondelo picking up the coaching reins in 2012, the amiable playcaller then claiming a FIBA EuroBasket Women title just one year later – followed by a historic first-ever Final appearance at the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup in 2014 and then a maiden Olympic Final last year in Rio.

Having an elite-level coach who is coveted worldwide is just one major piece in the Spanish jigsaw which so often comes together. Staggeringly, they are seeking a fifth-straight podium finish in all FIBA competitions and a jaw-dropping eighth medal in the previous nine editions of FIBA EuroBasket Women.

They will be led by a bonafide legend in point guard, Laia Palau. She will play for her country at this one last tournament in what has been a stellar career and everyone within the Spanish camp will have that added motivation to send her off in style – just as they did with Amaya Valdemoro and Elisa Aguilar against hosts France in Orchies in 2013.

Trying to follow in those immeasurable footsteps, or at least in the long-term, will be Leticia Romero - although the experienced WNBA and EuroLeague Women quality of Anna Cruz will be around for a little while longer yet to help pull the strings.

Palau and Cruz are just two proven world-class performers and they're not the only ones. Alba Torrens is one of the most popular and dynamic players worldwide, able to run the floor like few others and hit momentum-shifting shots when needed.

Marta Xargay has taken her skills to both sides of the Atlantic in recent times, with her WNBA minutes adding to her high-quality displays with ZVVZ USK Prague. She is someone who has the ultimate trust of coach Mondelo for every possible situation and is now a true leader for her country.

The big question mark leading up to the tournament had been whether 2013 FIBA EuroBasket Women MVP Sancho Lyttle would be re-taking the naturalized spot from Astou Ndour who represented her adopted nation in Rio last year and in the 2015 Final Round. While both have their major upsides, Lyttle has been given the nod and she does seem to pack an unrivalled defensive punch - something that will give Spain an extra hard-nosed edge.

Spain ooze quality and are one of the biggest attractions in town whenever they step out at major tournaments. Perhaps because they not only have the stars on their roster, but they play in a stylish, yet disciplined way – one which is easy on the eye and a pleasure to watch.

With only one high-profile failure back in 2011 and a track record which is up there with the very best, they will be many people's favorites to re-take the title they relinquished in a third-place finish in Budapest two years ago. It would take a brave person to go against coach Mondelo and Co. doing just that.

COACH

LUCAS MONDELO

Nationality: Spanish
Date of Birth: 28/07/67
Place of Birth: Barcelona
Team 2016-17: Dynamo Kursk (Russia-Premier League)
Club Career: CB Olesa Espanyol (Spain-LF, 2008-10); Perfumerias Avenida (Spain-LF, 2010-12); Shanxi Rui Flame (China-WCBA, 2012-16); Dynamo Kursk (Russia-Premier League, 2016-17)
International Career: Spain U20 Women (Head Coach, 2010-11); Spain Women (Head Coach, 2012-)
Twitter: @Lmondelo

Described by many of his peers, players and associates as a truly unique character, Mondelo has delivered unprecedented success for his nation, racked up many historical highs and also attained success at club level around the globe – something which underlines his ability to communicate his ethos of flexibility, freedom of expression and having fun. Winning is a serious business, but the playcaller is never far away from a joke, a smile or a hug with someone either side of the on-court action. He has good reason for his happiness, since most things he touches turn to gold. A EuroLeague Women title against all odds in his first season at Avenida, a remarkable three successive WCBA titles with Shanxi Rui Flame and now a historic first EuroLeague Women title for Dynamo Kursk in his first year at the Russian club. At international level, he amassed a glorious title for Spain at his first FIBA EuroBasket Women Final Round, a first-ever FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup Final appearance and a historic maiden Olympic Final appearance for Spain in Rio as well, which is why he is considered as one of the very best.

SILVIA DOMINGUEZ

Height: 1.66
Position: Point Guard
Date of Birth: 31/01/87
Place of Birth: Montgat
Team 2016-17: Perfumerias Avenida (Spain-LF)
Career: UB FC Barcelona (Spain-LF, 2002-04); USP-CEU Adecco Estudiantes (Spain-LF, 2004-06); Halcon Avenida (Spain-LF, 2006-11); Ros Casares (Spain-LF, 2011-12); UMMC Ekaterinburg (Russia-Premier League, 2012-15); Perfumerias Avenida (Spain-LF, 2015-17)
Twitter: @sdominguez6
Instagram: sdominguez6

Concerns that Dominguez might have been in danger of fading into the background at international level were expelled in comprehensive fashion earlier this year, when she showcased her full repertoire in the Final of the Copa De La Reina. A true warrior, hard-nosed and smart operator at point guard, her qualities were complemented by a deluge of points as she was crowned MVP. She may have fierce competition on the Spanish roster, but the Perfumerias Avenida captain is enjoying a renaissance and three EuroLeague Women titles with three different clubs speaks volumes about her ability, temperament and reliability when called upon. She started playing at a young age when it looked like she might pursue artistic gymnastics where she performed in a high performance center. Her brother Jordi works as a TV journalist, on soccer channel Gol TV.

A special player who is exhilarating to watch, Torrens is renowned as one of the best players in the world and rated by many as the best in Europe. When she hits top gear, she is unstoppable in the open floor and will destroy anything in front of her in transition. Her athleticism means that whenever she has the ball, there is a buzz and sense of anticipation from her teammates, the fans and viewers. With nice handles, a sharp basketball brain and a real thirst to play the game in the right spirit and have some fun, it's rarely anything other than a joy to see her on the court. With EuroLeague Women titles in her locker and an array of podium finishes with Spain on her resume as well, much of that very productive medal haul has been down to her key contributions. The first sport of Torrens was soccer, while she has had a basketball venue named after her in her beloved Mallorca where she goes to disconnect from the pressures of elite level sport.

The inclusion of Bahí in the initial squad seemed to catch some people by surprise since it was way back in 2009 that the center last donned a Spanish national team jersey. Yet, to keen followers of Liga Femenina, the sight of the 28-year-old being given an opportunity will be welcomed as she has consistently improved over the years and is a highly-respected performer. Quite whether she can force her way into the final 12 and grab herself a debut at the Final Round is hanging in the balance. But impressing in camp and the preparation games helped her cause, as does her size and ability to matchup well defensively. She is a smart player and moves well in transition and has quick feet, this suits the style of Coach Mondelo.

If you want a measurement as to the true value and effectiveness of Nicholls, it is better that you divert your eyes away from the on-court aesthetics of her game. She may not ooze finesse, athleticism or have the smooth movement of many of her peers, but just take a look at the key digit from the 2016 Rio Olympics. You can gauge her true worth by the fact that Lucas Mondelo handed Nicholls more minutes than any other player as Spain rode to their historic appearance in the Final. Her aggression, work rate, smarts and ability to knock down shots and grab key rebounds is huge for her home nation. Trusted to the max by her coach and peers, that hard-nosed edge is a vital ingredient – even if some feel her qualities have not been utilized to the same degree during her club career. A keen amateur photographer, Nicholls is known by her colleagues for being a bad dancer and addicted to Netflix.

Opportunity knocks in deafening fashion for Romero in coming years, with many of the riches in the Spanish backcourt the wrong side of 30-years-old. That gives a great incentive to the playmaker to show that she can pick up the baton and increase her minutes and influence on the team. She has the speed and quickness of thought to make the grade at the highest level, something which she will evidence when she makes the transition from NCAA basketball to the pro-game. Slick in the open court and oozing class, she was recently listed for The Wade Trophy in the States - the oldest and most prestigious national player of the year award in women's college basketball. She then has the thrill of being included in the 2017 WNBA Draft, where she was picked up in the Second Round (16th pick overall) by the Connecticut Sun. Romero loves all sports and is a keen surfer.

The last four years have been transformational for Cruz, after firmly establishing herself as a leading light in the national team and taking her play to unprecedented levels in club basketball. She has evolved into a very handy combo guard, going from a shooting guard earlier in her career to running the point on both sides of The Pond to such a level, that she has done so with EuroLeague Women powerhouses Nadezhda and Dynamo Kursk, while also winning a WNBA Championship with Minnesota a couple of summers ago. Now occupying radar central after lifting EuroLeague Women 2017 silverware with Kursk, it's been quite a turnaround for a player who just gets better with age. Very popular and so much so that earlier in her career the fans of Rivas Ecolpolis tried to get a street named after her when she helped take the team to an incredible and surprise place at the first-ever EuroLeague Women Final Eight. Cruz has a twin brother Sergi, obtained a masters in sports journalism and started playing basketball she was six as the only girl on the court.

With Spain looking out for more depth in the frontcourt, Quevedo has ticked that box in a big way. She signed off her sparkling youth career with consecutive gold medals at the FIBA U20 Women's European Championship and that made it four titles in total. Attracted by her aggressive approach in the paint and ability to knock down a shot from the perimeter, her first senior tournament will live with her forever as it came at the Rio Olympics. Now a EuroLeague Women player with Perfumerias Avenida as well, she is hoping for a FIBA EuroBasket Women debut and continue that impressive upward curve. Quevedo is studying marketing and was originally a cross-country runner like her sister Yaiza.

When the first-choice frontcourt needs a break or aren't on their game, Gil is usually the first port of call for Spain, who love to benefit from her rebounding prowess and also her slick work off the ball which creates space for her teammates. Her mobility and offensive rebounding skills are hugely important and while she doesn't always appear to be as aggressive as you might expect or demand, you are probably being deceived. She is a handful and can be very tough to guard for opposing defenders. Meanwhile, having returned to Avenida last season, she has enjoyed being back in EuroLeague Women and bringing more domestic silverware to Pabellon Wurzburg. Gil loves to dance and play jokes, has a dog Kira and just received a gold medal for her accomplishments in basketball from her local province of Murcia.

After being overlooked for the last two editions of the Final Round, the shooting guard is hoping it will be a case of third time lucky and will finally make the cut. Although it hasn't happened for her at FIBA EuroBasket Women, she can boast silver medals at the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup 2014 and last year's Rio Olympics, which is significant compensation. Having made the move from Avenida to arch rivals Girona last summer, she has seemingly grown into a leader. This is a major attribute to add to her devastating shooting potential from downtown and her accomplished 3x3 skills – all of which means she is now a more complete player than ever before, with her added maturity possibly enough for her to make a belated Final Round appearance. Rodriguez has a twin called Manuel who is one of four brothers. She has two degrees having studied human nutrition and diets, while she also loves the beach.

With her steely stare and hard-as-nails reputation, Xargay is the ultimate enforcer who will stick to her assigned opponent with glee and smother them with an overpowering defensive blanket. Yet that is only one side of her skill-set and the guard has expanded her attributes impressively to the offensive side of her game in recent years. So much so, that she can now boast WNBA court time and when you add that to the EuroLeague Women title she won at just 20-years-old with Avenida, as well as many international medals, it is clear why she commands so much respect. Whether it is nullifying another team's danger source or knocking down a big shot, both elements make her one of Spain's newly established leaders - having first played the sport when she was just five years-old. Off the court, Xargay loves Vogue and designs and sells her own fashion range.

When the wider squad was announced ahead of the Final Round, there is little doubt that the inclusion of Sanchez came way out of leftfield, since the center has never played for her country at the senior level. Not only that, she only had one summer at youth level too. The Cadiz-native might have been forgiven for thinking that her time had passed given she will turn 28-years-old this year. But, her wonderful ascendancy in terms of productivity and impact each season in Liga Femenina with Universitario de Ferrol has earned her an unexpected chance. With the frontcourt being where Spain need to bolster, she brings size and matchup capabilities to the table. Sanchez initially tried soccer and sailing before basketball. She loves cinema and especially action and suspense movies.

Installed as captain of the team last year, few players can boast the extraordinary experience that Pascua has at the international level. She is preparing for an incredible seventh FIBA EuroBasket Women Final Round appearance - ironically only missing the 2013 title triumph in Orchie. A legend in her homeland after she made history last year by becoming the greatest ever rebounder in Liga Femenina, the hard-working center commands respect, puts her team first and is hugely popular both on and off the court. Away from basketball, Pascua has been studying psychology and loves animals - including her dog 'Truffle' and cat 'Boira'. She also reads four books a month and likes The Walking Dead and Game of Thrones series.

The naturalized Lyttle is a defensive powerhouse and wrote herself into Spanish basketball folklore when she was named MVP of FIBA EuroBasket Women 2013 after proving a colossus for her adopted nation by taking them to the title in Orchie. Her experience is priceless and she has found success on both sides of the Atlantic as a seasoned performer in the WNBA and with EuroLeague Women giants like Galatasaray and UMMC Ekaterinburg. She just loves hitting mid-range jumpers, likes to tidy up on the glass and can brutally shut down her opponents. Having never lost her Caribbean accent, the forward loves cricket and follows her beloved West Indies - picking up a bat and ball herself when she was younger. She was also a standout sprinter in the 400 meters and hurdles.

A bonafide EuroLeague Women legend, the legacy of Palau will never be forgotten after she became the first player in the competition to hit a magical milestone of 1,000 assists. Such an accomplishment should not be a surprise to her army of admirers who continue to be amazed by her passing skills, lightning-quick speed of thought and expert game management from the point guard spot. A role model for aspiring women ballers in Spain, she looks like a lock to continue within the Federation from a coaching or ambassadorial standpoint at some time in the future, now that she has opted to hang up her shoes. She will call time on her national team career in front of the locals in the Czech capital who adore her after she took ZVVZ USK Prague to the EuroLeague Women title in 2015. Palau loves music and has even written articles in specialist magazines. She reads a lot, paints and loves to travel in her van.

After an eye-catching youth career when Conde posted some very productive numbers and showed flashes of huge potential, it could be time to now make the transition to the senior ranks. A gold medal winner last summer at the FIBA U20 Women's European Championship and the leading scorer for the champions, this competition was wedged in between a freshman and sophomore season at Florida State University. She has plenty of natural talent combined with a good basketball IQ and temperament. Her versatility and leadership qualities also bode well for the future and she remains a player on the rise and one to look out for beyond this year's Final Round. She practiced many sports before basketball including equestrian, tennis, taekwondo and swimming. She loves indie music, books and cinema, while her brother is an aspiring soccer player at Atletico Madrid juniors.

UKRAINE

TRADITIONAL DARK HORSES LOOKING FOR THE LIMELIGHT

After their brilliant run in the Qualifiers which included a dazzling double triumph over reigning champions Serbia, it might be time for Ukraine to put their run of miserable Final Rounds behind them.

In their last nine outings at the event, they are a shocking 1-8, but after at least picking up a victory in the previous edition, they will be out to post a major improvement.

Described as dark horses in the past before failing to deliver, perhaps this year they are already riding in the spotlight and will be expected to continue their good form.

Much of the credit goes to playcaller Volodymyr Kholopov, who was promoted from assistant coach after FIBA EuroBasket Women 2015 and is yet to taste defeat in a competitive game. He has meshed the players together and found a way of playing which is rooted in a traditional style, whilst still giving the creative and explosive Alina Iagupova a chance to breathe her fire.

The star remains the central cog in the Ukraine wheel and while her breath-taking talent has never been in doubt, she heads into this summer having also proven her mental resilience with a full season at ESBVA-LM in a competitive French League and EuroLeague Women.

The biggest mistake any opponents of Ukraine can make is to think that the sky-high and spectacular three-point shooting of Iagupova, along with her wonderful athleticism, is the only danger which needs mitigation.

The success of Ukraine in the Qualifiers and their campaign in this Final Round tournament will also revolve heavily around their impressive frontcourt height, power and imposing physicality.

The likes of Kateryna Dorogobuzova and Olesia Malashenko can be difference-makers and assuming they are healthy, their presence could give a significant boost, especially given Malashenko did not appear in the Final Round two years ago.

Ukraine have turned to experienced guard D'Andra Moss as their first-ever naturalized player which adds more depth and experience, while also inevitably increasing their efficiency.

The one cloud for Ukraine is that they haven't been able to shore up what could have been an outstanding rotation under the hoop, since it looks like there will be no Valeriya Berezhynska, Viktoriya Mircheva or Aleksandra Khomenchuk and that could seriously dent their ambitions.

With them on board, there would have been no excuse for Ukraine not to make the last eight and finally pass through the Group Phase. Although, even without some big-hitters in the paint, they have the coach and the momentum to succeed and post an improvement - but history can sometimes weigh heavy on a nation with a track record they want to forget.

Such was the buzz around this current Ukraine side, some people previously felt they had a realistic opportunity to make the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup 2018. Perhaps even a genuine shot at the podium - something which, considering the challenging off-court situation faced by Ukraine, might just give the whole nation a timely and exciting lift.

However, their late personnel issues under the basket seems to have seriously quelled expectations and at least it will relieve some of the pressure, which could be a positive.

COACH

VOLODYMYR KHOLOPOV

Nationality: Ukrainian
Date of Birth: 21/03/70
Place of Birth: Kyiv
Team 2016-17: Avangard Kyiv (Ukraine-Superleague)
Club Career: SK Cherkasy Monkeys (Ukraine-Superleague, 2008-14); Avangard Kyiv (Ukraine-Superleague, 2016-17)
International Career: Ukraine Women (Head Coach, 2015-)

After representing his country and winning domestic honors as a player, Kholopov now finds himself about to turn the page on his rapidly burgeoning coaching career as he makes his Final Round debut. Although, that is only his debut as head coach, since he has faithfully fulfilled assistant coach duties in the past – something which will surely make the tournament experience much easier to handle. Incredibly, since jumping into the playcaller's hot-seat, he hasn't tasted defeat in a competitive game after winning all six of the Qualifiers - including an eye-popping double against reigning champions, Serbia. Now he is looking for the upward curve to continue by taking Ukraine past the first phase, having also coached Avangard Kyiv in the women's league last season. Previously he was mainly involved in men's basketball at SK Cherkasy Monkeys.

It seems incredible that because of serious injury, unavailability and Ukraine missing out in 2011, Malashenko is expected to return to the Final Round for the first time since 2009 when she was handed a place while still a teenager. At that time, there was so much hype surrounding her that she struggled to cope with expectation and there was also a lot of mitigation with health issues. Now playing as well as ever in the highly regarded Turkish League where she has spent three straight seasons, the forward has met the physical and mental demands to demonstrate her class and mature smarts. She also led Ukraine in rebounding during the Qualifiers, as well as posting a double-figure scoring return per game. If she remains fully fit and focused, her nation will reap the rewards from a genuine difference-maker, with a strong mid-range jumper and crafty defensive work. Malashenko likes photography, studies psychology and dreams of going to an NBA game.

There is unlikely to be a more athletic and explosive player at the Final Round than Ukraine's phenomenal leader and stellar-talented swingman. One of the biggest stars in European basketball and a colossus for her country since the day she first pulled on her beloved national team vest as a youth player, Iagupova is in the business of racking up big numbers. Actually, scrap that. Sensational numbers. She can shoot from anywhere on the court with her distinctive sky-high triples and don't be surprised when she releases from an outrageously long way downtown. She has the range and if that outside game is not devastating enough, it's tough to stop someone of her athletic ability and force when she opts to power dribble her way to the bucket. Any major tournament highlights reel will inevitably feature something from her and she has the capability of getting fans out of their seats. Whether it is her willingness to go coast-to-coast, hit the clutch shot, come up with a big block, her brilliance and influence is in no doubt – as her 21 points per game during the Qualifiers will evidence. A newly crowned LFB champions and attracting WNBA interest, she could be a leading light at The Final Round. Iagupova dreams about having her own restaurant and plays video games with her roommate Lyudmyla Naumenko.

Still in her teenage years and having created a real buzz around her performances for Ukraine at youth level where she put her name up in lights last year at the FIBA U20 Women's European Championship Division B with a jaw-dropping tournament double-double, the transition to long-term senior duty is surely imminent. The forward has already been given a taste of what is required at the elite level during the Qualifiers when she was used briefly and with another outstanding domestic season on her resume, one of the most promising young players in Ukraine will surely be promoted. After using all of her good footwork and handling, alongside her size and strength, she is a player to watch out for not just if she makes it to the Final Round, but way beyond the action in the Czech Republic.

There is a consensus that few players emerged with more credit from the Qualifiers than Zarytska, who played some of the best basketball of her lengthy national team career. Averaging more than 11 points per game and because she shot the ball so well from the arc, which is her trademark, Ukraine's opponents were provided with a major headache. She also pulled down an average of almost six rebounds per game and while she did not feature in the Final Round two years ago, a return for the first time since her debut appearance in 2013 seems a certainty. A prolific scorer at youth level, she has finally unlocked her long-standing potential to put points on the board regularly at senior level. She has the quality to continue making an impact and might be a name to scribble down on a tournament watch-list under the category of sleeper. Even if she is 31-years-old now, the blossom looks like it is coming late for Zarytska. She was engaged before the start of the national team camp this summer and is getting married very soon. She loves 3x3 and wants to become a coach.

Despite not featuring during the Qualifiers after playing for her country at the previous edition of the Final Round, a recall could now be on the menu. Not least because she is riding high on confidence having won the BLK Championship at Slezka Wroclaw as her team shot down defending Polish powerhouse Wisla Can-Pack. It demonstrates her ongoing development having conquered her homeland earlier in her career. A very active rebounder at both ends of the floor and a respectable perimeter threat, Coach Kholopov knows she has plenty of upsides.

One of the first names down on the team sheet for any game now, Dorogobuzova was handed more minutes than any of her colleagues in the six Qualifiers and that highlights her value to her country. A dream to coach but often a nightmare to come up against, the forward can be relentless in her mission for the team and that is why she is admired so greatly within the Ukraine locker room and by the coaching staff. She will work tirelessly on the glass and gorge herself on put-back scores when the opportunities arise. What makes her game so valued is that she has one of the best shooting ranges of any of the 'biggs' and so when she is not taking her defender out beyond the three-point line to create space for her teammates in the paint, she is knocking down three-balls. The only frustration can be her tendency to get into foul trouble which manifested itself at her last Final Round appearance, but her many upsides make up for that issue. She speaks fluent French, Polish, Bulgarian and English. She wanted to learn foreign languages formally at University but now learns languages in the countries where she plays basketball.

Spitkovska made her Final Round debut two years ago and while she only played a few minutes, she has continued to evolve and impress on the international stage. So much so, she played a part in all six of the Qualifiers which underlines how she is now an established member of the roster. Originally more of a shooting guard who can pass, she has worked incredibly hard to establish herself as more of a playmaker who can shoot – something that was a necessity in the wake of the retirement of national team players and Ukraine worried about a lack of options. Her versatility comes in very useful, as does a cool head and nice handles, as well as posing a threat from the outside. More confident with each passing year, she was a star for Avangard in her homeland last season with almost five assists per game. That bodes nicely for when she is asked to step off the bench and onto the hardwood at the Final Round and pull the strings. Spitkovska likes online shopping and tests her skills in interior design by making alterations to her apartment.

It could prove to be the perfect 30th birthday gift if Olkhovyyk finds herself on Czech Republic soil wearing a Ukraine vest, having never previously featured in the Final Round. In fact, she has barely played at all at senior level, which mystifies many who have seen her compete regularly with various clubs in EuroCup Women – including last season at Uniao Sportiva of Portugal. Crucially, she was ever present during Ukraine’s Qualifiers and that points strongly towards her being handed a major tournament debut appearance for her country. She will try to reward such a decision by stepping into games and trying to get some shots to drop from long-distance – something she has been doing regularly throughout her career. Opposing defenses must also be cautious about allowing her to exploit space in the lanes as she will go hard to the hoop if needed.

Now she has signed off on her youth career which proved to be very fruitful for the swingman, the time has arrived for Horobets to make the transition to the senior set-up. She has been banging on the door for a while and having poured in more than 14 points per game for Tim-Skuf Kyiv to lift them to the Ukrainian Championship, she may have demonstrated she is ready to progress. Horobets also has the third dimension on her resume of having played for two seasons outside of her homeland in Lithuania, including some minutes in EuroCup Women. That is something of a rarity for a young Ukrainian player, but is evidence that her talent has already been recognized outside of her home nation. She is a nice shooter and rebounds aggressively, so even if opportunities are limited with Ukraine having depth in her position, she is still a worthy candidate to make the grade.

The guard made history last year when she became the first high-profile naturalized player to pull on a Ukraine vest. Already playing at club level with Olesia Malashenko in Mersin, there is an established link to the national team which has helped with a relatively smooth transition. An experienced player who has played in many of Europe’s major leagues, it is now going to be a fascinating test to see how Moss applies herself at a major tournament. She has only got two games under her belt so far, but she is unlikely to be fazed by the prospect as she has big faith in her own ability and offers Ukraine another go-to option in the clutch. However, rather than down the stretch, it is all about a steady hand which the guard offers and her decision-making ability which means Ukraine are likely to be far more consistent in their tempo and offensive rhythm than in the past. Moss spends all her free time learning online as she is working on becoming a fitness coach and opening her own gym.

For a player with such a cosmopolitan resume which includes experience in the flikes of Israel, Italy, Belgium, Bulgaria and most recently France, it remains something of a surprise Maznichenko has yet to appear at a Final Round. However, after being named in the All-Star Five of Ligue 2 for her performances with Montbrison last season, this could be about to change as she is one of the in-form players within the Ukrainian camp. Her defensive abilities are very strong and when combined with her interior skills and impressive shooting range, which is most deadly from the elbow and extends beyond the perimeter, she has plenty to offer. Although, having not been part of the rotation during the Qualifiers, she is effectively having to prove she can come in from the cold and contribute to a winning team which might be a tough assignment.

Formerly known by her maiden name of Bovykina, the forward may feel aggrieved that she has never been selected for a Final Round previously, having participated in multiple Qualifiers. After being overlooked twice, Udodenko will be hoping it is a case of third time lucky and a long-awaited debut will be handed to her. Helped by time in EuroCup Women in recent seasons, she has worked her way back into the mix and did particularly well during the last of the Qualifiers against reigning FIBA EuroBasket Women champions, Serbia. With the last memory of her capabilities strongly embedded in the minds of the coaching staff, this could be the moment she has been waiting for. Udodenko dreams of being a coach one day, insists that if she ever has a daughter, she will become a player too and grow up to be a champion.

Despite being 31-years-old, the experienced center has only ever played once at a Final Round, back in 2009, and so her reintegration into the national team setup has been a big bonus. It is also not a coincidence that her return has seen the team enjoy an upturn in fortunes during their excellent results in the Qualifiers. Featuring in all six games, Berezhynska brings good size, know-how and a sizeable injection of quality which saw her get drafted to the WNBA earlier in her career. Since then, she has been shining in EuroCup Women and the French League with Flammes Carolo Basket who have had their best season in memory, with the Ukrainian at the heart of their core rotation. Away from basketball, Berezhynska is getting involved more as a fitness instructor.

OLGA DUBROVINA

Height: 1.72
Position: Point Guard
Date of Birth: 02/05/87
Place of Birth: Dnepropetrovsk
Team 2016-17: Astana Tigers (Kazakhstan-Higher League)
Career: Dnipro Dnepropetrovsk (Ukraine-Higher League, 2005-08); Lodz (Poland-PLKK, 2008-09); Szeviép Szeged (Hungary-A, 2009); Dnipro Dnepropetrovsk (Ukraine-Higher League, 2009-10); Dynamo Kyiv (Ukraine-Higher League, 2010); Lucca (Italy-A1, 2010-11); Kazachka-Zalk Zaporozhye (Ukraine-Higher League, 2011); Neftochimic Burgas (Bulgaria-NBL, 2011-13); Elisavet-basket Kirovograd (Ukraine-Higher League, 2013-14); Haskovo 2012 (Bulgaria-NBL, 2014-15); Astana Tigers (Kazakhstan-Higher League, 2015-17)

The playmaker is a genuine starting five option for Ukraine because of her all-round influence and productivity which shone brightly during the Qualifiers. She handed out a fantastic average of 4.5 assists per game in just 17 minutes of court-time to remind everyone that while competition has increased with the arrival of a naturalized player, Ukraine have a very capable player who can be their main architect in the backcourt. Dubrovina could lay claim to being the whole package because she knows how to work her way through traffic to the basket and is renowned for her defensive presence. She loves piling pressure onto opposing guards and making them crack, with that level of tenacity returning more steals than anyone else on the way to Czech Republic. A long-time servant of the national team, the guard is preparing for her fourth Final Round outing. Off the floor, Dubrovina has fun cooking dishes from every country where she has played, including famous Ukrainian dishes. She always bakes something for her teammates and is also married to Bulgarian soccer player, Emil Danchev.

LYUDMYLA NAUMENKO

Height: 1.87
Position: Power Forward/Center
Date of Birth: 30/06/93
Place of Birth: Pomokli
Team 2016-17: ESBVA-LM (France-LFB)
Career: Regina Bar Basket (Ukraine- Higher League, 2011-13); Tim-Skuf Kyiv (Ukraine-Higher League, 2013-14); Astana Tigers (Kazakhstan-Higher League, 2014-15); Castors Braine (Belgium-D1, 2015); Okzhetpes (Kazakhstan-D1, 2015-16); ESBVA-LM (France-LFB, 2016-17)

There is much debate about the relative merits of Naumenko who many feel has not been able to use the title of being the best center of the Ukrainian Championship at the age of 20-years-old as a springboard to greater things. On paper, her resume now boasts minutes with EuroLeague Women clubs such as Castors Braine and ESBVA-LM, but she never established herself fully in those rosters. Few would doubt that she does have nice ability, since she can crash the offensive glass particularly well and has a decent shooting action. Meanwhile her experience at senior level which included three appearances in the six Qualifiers, is enough to suggest she might still receive a place in the final twelve for the Final Round.

BLUEPRINT FOR THE FUTURE BEING FORCED INTO FOREGROUND

More major tournament sunshine has been unexpectedly replaced by worrying clouds for Belarus after being rocked by some high-profile absences.

Exactly a decade after they took the Final Round by storm to finish with a first-ever medal at the event, hopes had been high that the current generation, which has been led so brilliantly by Yelena Leuchanka, might get to launch yet another podium challenge. After all, they were ever-presents at all major events during the last Olympic cycle, including a Semi-Finals appearance in the previous Final Round in Budapest.

But it looks like they will be without several main players including their famous 'Twin Towers' of Fenerbahce star Anastasiya Verameyenka and the legendary Yelena Leuchanka.

This has been the foundation of their success and without the naturalized veteran Lindsey Harding or similarly experienced Tatyana Troina, the roster suddenly looks decidedly short on big-game experience.

This is also set against the backdrop of last year's Olympian Nataliya Trafimava being unexpectedly thrown the coaching reins during the Qualifiers, following the departure of the very successful Anatoli Buyalski.

The rookie coach should at least have some plus points to mitigate the immeasurable void left by her former teammates, in that the inspirational Katsiaryna Snytsina will be back. The winger is a class act and has shown her leadership and on-court skills in EuroLeague Women lately with Hatay.

Belarus have also managed to secure the services of a new naturalized option in the shape of Alexandria Bentley. The free-scoring playmaker has been tearing it up in the Turkish League and also brings genuine WNBA quality. The guard spots have been a real issue for Belarus for several years, so this is a real boon for them.

Perhaps most importantly, Maryia Papova has had a brilliant season with Turkish juggernauts Galatasaray and finally shown she can live up to the hype which accompanied her when she was a younger player. She has answered all the critics who felt she had plateaued and it's well-timed as she now has no option but to be a leader for the national team.

Another 'X-Factor' player who will help enormously is Tatsiana Likhtarovich who was superb in Rio, shooting almost 55 percent from the field and always offering ideas and energy whenever she is on the hardwood.

However, with such a serious dent to the experience and quality of the playing personnel compared to the past, it will be a baptism of fire for Trafimava. Belarus have not exactly been plunged into a crisis, but do have to cope with some seriously strong head-winds - the strength of which was cranked up considerably when Leuchanka removed herself from consideration during preparation.

Either way, the transition which many had expected around Tokyo 2020 has been brought forward and we will soon have a better idea of how they might cope with the seemingly daunting challenge.

From a patriotic and emotional perspective, there was arguably nobody better placed to pick up the coaching reins than Trafimava who, until recently, was the player who led the way in shaping, enhancing and re-energizing the locker room spirit during a devoted decade for the national team. Now she is the person responsible for issuing instructions and expressing her ideas as playcaller for Belarus – something which came just a few months after she was treading the boards at the Rio Olympics. Last November she was installed into the hot-seat for the last window of the Qualifiers, and managed to navigate her beloved country safely back to the Final Round. She never shirked a challenge during a playing career where her knees gave her pain, and having sacrificed her own health at times, she knows the stakes are high and will only accept 100 percent commitment. Her actual coaching experience has at least been boosted by coaching Horizont in the Belarus Premier League in the last 18 months.

The playmaker is a very competent member of the national team talent pool, but has had her career shortened somewhat by a multitude of injury setbacks. She did at least make it to the Olympics in Rio last summer and even if her participation was minimal it was richly deserved for all of the hard work she has done in rehabilitating herself from many low points. Not that it was a sentimental choice to utilize her, since she is one of few natural point guards that Belarus can rely upon who can keep her composure in crunch time. With a sky-high basketball IQ, she will be called upon to play a bigger role with the absence of Lindsey Harding. But make no mistake, Tarasava is more than capable of starting or finishing a game at this level – you only need to glance at her displays at the Final Round in France in 2013 for evidence of that. She also comes into the tournament off the back of a solid season with TSV 1880 Wasserburg.

Very much 'captain fantastic' and the life and soul of the Belarusian team, Snytsina is the heartbeat of the side and a brilliant leader who carries her teammates with her through difficult times – as well as often adding style and flair when things are going in a positive direction. Leave her open and don't complain when she lights you up, because more often than not, the net is swishing if you don't respect her stellar shooting capabilities. Once she is in a good rhythm she can take games away from opponents very quickly and has also had some great displays at club level with Hatay – including facilitating a surprise Turkish SuperCup win last season. Her hard-nosed mindset means she will even step into the four spot for short periods when the national team needs her. She is also now renowned for her love and skill of selfies – so if Belarus do well in this competition, you had better hit those social media channels to check out her efforts.

Career: RUOR-Minsk (Belarus-Premier League, 2013-16); Tsmoki-Minsk (Belarus-Premier League, 2016-17)

Could Sushchik be the long-term answer for Belarus in the point guard spot – or at least as a very reliable back-up playmaker who can contribute at this level? She has only just exited her teenage years a few months ago, so has a lot still to learn, but the evidence of her impressive year with Tsmoki-Minsk means she at least has a creditable season with one of the big-hitters to her name. She played significant minutes and dished the ball up nicely, while not allowing anybody to take liberties while she was playing defense. It remains to be seen if she has done enough to force herself into the reckoning, but combined with some nice tournaments at youth level, the guard is on the right track towards impressing Coach Trafimava – both with her skills and newly evidenced maturity.

It's at the defensive end of the court where Ziuzkova comes into her own and shines most brightly, although a fruitful season in Lithuania at Hoptrans-Sirenos has reminded everyone that she does have genuine combo capabilities. Only three years ago she took huge acclaim for the way she pulled the strings at Tsmoki-Minsk, with the pivotal role in guiding them to a first-ever domestic Championship. Her sharp eye for a pass, combined with her one-on-one ability as a defender, were both heralded as key ingredients in a historic run. After playing only a few minutes in Rio and not that much more in the Qualifiers on the road to the Czech Republic, she will be keen to demonstrate her willingness to continue as a valued role player, because she has never let the national team down during the fleeting opportunities she has had.

Filonchik never thought it was going to happen with the senior team until last summer when she realized her Olympic dream with a spot on the Rio roster. Even if she was confined to the bench throughout the competition, it was still a breakthrough for her after missing out so many times before. Many had been willing her towards such an accomplishment after a career spent as the iconic leader of Olimpia Grodno, where she was the main protagonist of the happiest times in the club's history. Her inclusion at last year's Olympics helped her finally seal a move outside of her homeland and she comes into the summer better equipped than ever for success. Having posted a very good first season in the high-quality and demanding Russian Premier League at Chevakata, she's proven she can be consistent in a more challenging environment and against some of the top players in Europe and the world, while Belarus will certainly be advised to take advantage of her extensive shooting range which stretches beyond the arc.

Anyone glancing at the international resume of Rytsikava without prior knowledge of her health issues might struggle to be impressed with the fact she featured in Rio last year and the previous edition of the Final Round, but only for a paltry number of minutes. Set against the context of a horrific back injury in 2012 which seriously threatened to derail her promising career and took two years to rehabilitate from, it is extraordinary that she is still in the mix at all. Having taken the opportunity to start a family during her enforced period of absence from the sport, she returned with a new lease of life and didn't waste any time in hitting top gear at Horizont where she has remained ever since. Last season was one of her very best as she shot the lights out from long-range and was also deadly inside the three-point line too. That means she could hang on to her place once more and with the shots dropping again so frequently, people are remembering the 2010 FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup when she famously dropped 15 points on Russia.

A great prospect, who has enjoyed a very productive career wearing Belarus national team colors at youth level, Inkina has been making a late surge to make her first-ever senior tournament. If she does, the team will get the benefits of having a fearless teenage talent who can put points on the board and won't let her lack of elite level experience stop her from being bold. She has excelled in for Belarus in recent youth tournaments and even if she doesn't quite make the cut this time, she is a lock to become a regular in the medium to long term.

A player for all seasons, the do-it-all abilities of Likhtarovich have risen to the fore in the past few years, so much so, you can expect her name to be underlined and typed in bold on any opponent's scouting report. That's because she is the ultimate 'X-Factor', with her gifted athletic abilities and quickness on the wing complemented by her handles, her ghostly slashes to the bucket and now by a more reliable three-point shooting. Her performances in Rio last year and also at the Final Round 12 months earlier put any doubts to bed. She showed that she can be efficient and effective much more regularly and has been rewarded with a deluge of minutes. Indeed only one of her colleagues received more court time in the Qualifiers.

After showing a huge amount of patience in the wake of a terrific youth career for Belarus which signalled a fast-track transition to the senior team, it didn't quite pan out that way until she finally got her chance at FIBA EuroBasket Women 2015. Now she is banking on a return for a second Final Round appearance after missing out on the Rio Olympics last summer. Such disappointment has been followed by Ivashchanka pushing the eject button on her comfort zone, as she opted to leave Belarus and hop next door to Poland to play for Energa Torun. While her progress has been far from spectacular, it has given her a new perspective and impetus to push for a national team return ticket. It will always be difficult as there is quite a queue in front of her, but don't discount her being given another chance to show her evolving inside game.

It's now getting to the point where Holubeva needs to convince the coaching staff that she is able to test herself at the senior level. As part of the 'next generation' who have come through but rarely established themselves amongst the long-serving core, turning 23-years-old is a wake-up call to both parties that Belarus need to decide if she is worth a gamble. Not that it would necessarily be a risk introducing the playmaker at all, as she has become ever more influential with each season at her hometown club Olimpia Grodno. During this past season, she has really shifted up her downtown shooting to a new gear and while she is not the kind of player regularly filling the highlight reels, she gets the job done with impressive efficiency.

Instagram: masha_papova13

Realizing her long-standing potential and having shed the label as the rising star and great hope for the future, Papova is now a bonafide starting option for Belarus or at least a central cog in the core rotation wheel. Picked up last summer by Istanbul juggernauts Galatasaray, she has been embarking on the most challenging chapter of her career to date in a tough environment and top-quality league. The ups and downs of recent years seem to have subsided after the forward injected some much-needed consistency into her game and it has been demonstrated beautifully with the national team as she enters her fifth major tournament since her debut in 2013, having posted better scoring returns at each event. Although some people feared she was not athletic or big enough to be a power forward and lacking the quickness of a wing player, her ability to step inside or drain scores from behind the three-point line means she is hard to guard. Consequently, while others have posed the question, Papova is coming up with answers that get more emphatic and hold more weight with each passing season.

deally placed to impress under the watchful eye of Coach Trafimava who also oversees club affairs at Horizont, the young forward is knocking on the door of a major tournament debut. Even if her youth career wasn't as stellar as some of her country's other rising stars, her pragmatic, simplistic and ultimately consistent approach in most facets of her game is likely to be a major plus point in her quest for inclusion on the final roster. Still evolving in terms of her face-up and back-to-the-basket play, she would benefit enormously from viewing the very best from the Belarus bench at the Final Round. Meanwhile, having turned 20-years-old, her country will be keen to test her on this kind of stage. She did get to play a couple of minutes in the Qualifiers and even if the action in the Czech Republic has come too soon for her to squeeze onto the end of the bench, she is sure to feature prominently in the medium to long term.

The veteran center might be required to make an unexpected return to the fold some four years after she last appeared at the Final Round when she took to the floor in France. If she does get the nod for a comeback, the 36-year-old will provide her usual offering from the bench, having worked hard to show she can still offer something valuable during the preparation games. She has a wealth of experience, having played in various leagues across Europe and has won various titles, including EuroCup Women with Galatasaray. A good rebounder and well-disciplined, she was part of the Belarus team that won bronze in 2007, played at the Beijing Olympics a year later and then debuted at the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup during 2010.

Filling the naturalized spot for Belarus and picking up the reins from Lindsey Harding, it will be a big task for Bentley as she will need to put points on the board. It looks like a shrewd move by the Belarusian Federation to swoop for her services, since scoring is one of Bentley's strong points and she is likely to be given the green light to not only create, but carry the main scoring threat. She has shown she can do this in the Turkish League from a European perspective and also in the WNBA with Atlanta and Connecticut. The only question will be around how she adapts to the international game and if she is able to find instant chemistry with her new teammates.

It has been largely unfortunate that throughout her career, Hasper has not had much of an opportunity to shine because of the long shadow that the likes of the great Yelena Leuchanka casts. Consequently, back-up roles are all that she has had and even this has not been consistent. Nevertheless, the center is an Olympian having played on her country's debut at the event in Beijing back in 2008. She has also played at a FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup, while interestingly her only Final Round minutes came exactly a decade ago when Belarus burst onto the scene and took bronze. Cementing herself as the most consistent center in Belarusian domestic basketball in the past eight to nine years where she has mostly dominated for Tsmoki-Minsk, she looks like being given the chance to resurrect her international career. With key absences, she might even find herself plunged into the starting five.

ITALY

READY TO EXTEND THEIR RECENT RENAISSANCE

After turning heads in 2013 but then stumbling in 2015, Italy are likely to be targeting the Quarter-Finals after their impressive run in the Qualifiers.

Their renaissance in the wake of a below-par tournament two years ago in Hungary and Romania has been largely due to new head coach, Andrea Capobianco.

Not only because of his eye-catching work with the team in leading them to five wins during six games en-route to the Final Round, rather because this was founded largely on bringing veteran forward Laura Macchi back into the mix after a lengthy six-year sabbatical from the senior national team.

It proved to be a real masterstroke, as the EuroLeague Women star was a difference-maker during the Qualifiers in a difficult group. She ended up as her nation's leading scorer after rolling back the years with some devastating displays which turned the tide in Italy's favor.

She will be joined by another legend of Beretta Famila Schio and indeed Italian women's basketball in general, as Raffaella Masciadri also seeks a sweet swansong as she prepares to hang up her basketball shoes.

Such is the revered nature of her capabilities; it appears a career with the Federation as a coach or in a technical capacity will beckon. The respect Masciadri commands also manifested itself through her recent election as the Athletes Representative on the Italian Olympic Committee.

However, Italy are not only about giving a farewell to their 'golden-oldies' as there is something special happening at the opposite end of the spectrum too. With many of the Italian youth teams flourishing, there could be an exciting medium-to-long-term flourish in store.

In the shorter term, all eyes will be on the stellar-talented swingman Cecilia Zandalasini who signed off her youth career last summer with a spectacular display at the FIBA U20 Women's European Championship. She was deservedly crowned MVP of the tournament and a Final Round now beckons as she tries to impose herself at the senior level with her multi-ranging offensive weapons.

The veterans and emerging players fall within a strong core of players such as guards Giorgia Sottana and Francesca Dotto – alongside the wing play of Chiara Consolini and experienced center, Kathrin Röss.

Yet it is perhaps the frontcourt which remains the greatest issue, some people pointing to the fact that a naturalized option under the basket could transform them into candidates for a FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup 2018 berth.

As it is, they will be hoping the likes of Martina Bestagno can continue her very encouraging work from the Qualifiers when she averaged double-digits. The forward has also gained additional experience in EuroLeague Women of late.

The biggest positive for Italy is that they might think the wind is blowing behind them when it comes to the Group as Turkey are likely to be in transition, Belarus short-handed and Slovak Republic without a naturalized option themselves – having had Kristi Toliver in 2015.

Therefore, the Quarter-Finals look to be a very real possibility and then anything is possible – although they will need to step up in the paint and collectively crash the glass.

COACH

ANDREA CAPOBIANCO

Nationality: Italian
Date of Birth: 09/08/66
Place of Birth: Napoli
Team 2016-17: Did not coach
Club Career: Pallacanestro Salerno (Italy-B2, 1997-05); Air Avellino (Italy-Serie A, 2005-06); Fileni BPA Jesi (Italy-Lega2, 2006-08); Siviglia Wear Teramo (Italy-Serie A, 2008-11)
International Career: Italy Women (Head Coach, 2015-)

One of the most respected coaches in Italy, the women's team received a major boost when Capobianco was handed the coaching reins in the wake of Italy's underwhelming Final Round performance in 2015. Having coached in the men's top league for much of his career, as well as delivering success at youth level with Italy, there is plenty of experience to call upon. One of his first major coups was to persuade Laura Macchi to end her hiatus from national team duties and it proved a masterstroke. Now with a very successful qualifying campaign on his resume, hopes are high that Capobianco can continue his country's newfound momentum.

A genuine combo-guard option who is happy writing the headlines or posting a cameo for the team, Sottana is able to bring the noise from behind the arc and that three-point threat will be important if she can find some accuracy from downtown. However, the guard is also comfortable spotting up from shorter range or driving to the hoop and with her ability to pick out passes for her teammates, she can give opponents a real headache. Ten years after she made her Final Round debut, it will be her fourth outing at the event and it will be interesting to see if she remains a leader or has to play a lesser role with fierce competition in the backcourt. Sottana has a great passion for movies and cinema and after her career ends, she is likely to become a director or film-maker.

A legend of the Italian game and also one of the most experienced EuroLeague Women players and performers, Macchi ended her lengthy hiatus from national team duties after the appointment of coach Capobianco. Her class, leadership and all-round influence was evident from the outset as she proved her value with a string of terrific performances in the Qualifiers. She could end up being the oldest player in the tournament at 38-years-old, but this won't stop her from being Italy's marquee and go-to player. Her height, shooting ability and veteran know-how are all ingredients which can make her a nightmare to guard and she will be the first name on the scouting report. Macchi is celebrating a decade of playing at Schio and has also played in the WNBA earlier in her career. She adores cats and Italian soccer player Francesco Totti, while she normally signs autographs with the names of famous Italian actresses.

Having written a major headline with her performances for Italy right through-out their impressive campaign at the Final Round in France four years ago, Dotto has now established herself as a premier playmaker in the Italian League and also for her country. She has evolved into a leader and the fact that only veteran star Laura Macchi received more minutes per game during Qualifiers, speaks volumes about how trusted she is by coach Capobianco. While you would ideally want her to pose more of an outside threat, she carries all the key ingredients of a top point guard, as she is a pass-first player who also brings it in a major way on defence and regularly tops the steals chart. She won't give her opponents a moment of rest and with her composure on offense, will be a vital cog in the wheel. Dotto also has a twin sister Caterina who plays professionally and has also featured for her country. The pair even played for Italy together earlier in their respective careers.

KATHRIN RESS

Height: 1.93

Place of Birth: Bolzano

If the team are to progress beyond the opening phase, much will hinge on the play of Ressa who gives the team a bonafide quality presence in the paint. Most notably she can match up defensively with some of the tournament's most awkward and imposing centers. Italy are not blessed with great depth under the basket and their leading rebounder from the previous edition of the tournament will have to go to work on the glass again, while her shot-blocking is also a bonus. She will be a good option offensively operating in the high or low post and while it may not be points scored from her own hands, her work off the ball occupying the defense will get others around her open. Ressa has a brother Tomas, who is also a professional player and has represented his country in the past.

It could be a case of tears of agony turning to tears of joy inside the space of 11 months if Tagliamento is handed a Final Round debut. One of Italy's brightest young things, the forward's eye-catching youth career ended on a stretcher last summer as she left the FIBA U20 Women's World Championship in Portugal bound for surgery after sustaining a serious knee injury. But the fighting qualities which she has shown throughout her burgeoning career as a young star rose to the fore and ahead of schedule she returned to make her debut in EuroLeague Women with Beretta Famila Schio. While she only featured briefly for Italy during the Qualifiers, she might just squeeze onto the roster as she is very much a central component of the future of the Italian national team and a hugely popular figure both on and off the court. Tagliamento is known for living much of her life out on Instagram, with 10 Instagram stories per day a regular occurrence.

It feels like it is time for Formica to show what she can do as a more mature player, having initially burst onto the Final Round scene back during 2013 along with a number of other young guns. However, she was quiet two years ago at the previous edition in Romania and Hungary when she had limited court time and could not make the kind of impact many had hoped for after a standout youth career. Having made her first move as a professional last summer, the center has been playing at Ragusa and that fresh challenge should give her an impetus when it comes to the national team. While she is not a prolific scorer, her usefulness on the glass is important and watch out for her chasing down offensive boards for her team when she comes off the bench. Formica has a personal blog, as she loves to write and is a sure thing to become a reporter.

A hugely popular figure and another Italian basketball and Schio legend, Masciadri could be about to enjoy a deserved swansong to her glittering national team career. She has always answered the call from her country and has been first to step up to the plate and deliver leading performances, both offensively and defensively, as well as playing an essential role in respect of the successful integration and evolution of younger players. Her 12 years at Schio have been full of team and individual accolades, while she also has WNBA court time on her resume. Last season she was handed a special award after passing a staggering 600 games in the Italian League. The captain of the team, Masciadri draws huge respect not only in basketball, but also in sport in general, something which manifested itself as Masciadri fought off a host of athletes to get voted onto CONI - the Italian Olympic Committee.

One of the most prolific scorers in youth basketball in recent years, Zandalasini ended her career in suitable style as MVP at the FIBA U20 Women's European Championship last summer. Her displays were truly magical and she almost inspired Italy to one of the greatest title comeback wins in the tournament's history. Her performances came as no surprise as she has been on the radar for some time as one of the best of her generation in Europe. She would have gone to the Final Round two years ago but had to focus on her studies and now she is ready to not only make a senior tournament debut, but also make a big splash. She can play multiple positions, puts points on the board quickly and loves making clutch shots. She has the capacity to become the best player on the roster in coming years and that potential is already manifesting itself nicely in EuroLeague Women with Schio. The only question is whether she can handle the ever-increasing expectations on her young shoulders. Zandalasini has a great passion for Derrick Rose and for American basketball culture and music.

Eying up what would be her third Final Round appearance, this hard-nosed guard is perfect for an injection of tenacity into any situation and she won't back down in any situation. Gatti has been playing healthy minutes as a back-up guard in EuroLeague Women with Schio and this is only further adding to her elite level experience which complements her other attributes. Mentally strong and taking great care of the ball, she rarely makes unforced errors and that reliability compensates for her limited three-point skills. However, look for Gatti dishing out the ball in a no-fuss way, while she is also adept at slicing her way to the hoops and using her strength to make the finish.

Patience is something Consolini must have plenty of as she had to wait until she was 27-years-old before she was finally handed a spot at the Final Round as she made a belated debut in the previous edition. One of the most consistent performers in the Italian League during the last decade where she has played at most of the leading teams, she also brings EuroLeague Women experience from Schio. While some injuries slowed her down for a while, she is playing some of the best basketball of her career at Ragusa and offers a real three-point option from the wing where she can make teams pay if they leave her open. She also has really nice height and length as well, so she is useful defensively and a very nice option for coach Capobianco off the bench. She is also very entertaining and known as the 'Queen of crazy shots', buzzer-beaters and some very strange faces and expressions whenever she is on the court.

The numbers don't tell the story about the importance of Crippa, whose willingness to set the tone defensively and turn up heat in a physical battle has manifested itself in the rise of Gesam Gas Lucca in the Italian League. The swingman has played a major role in their success and is one of the first names down on the sheet. While more likely to be seen stepping off the bench for her country, the same elements and qualities apply. She can make shots from downtown and will also help turn the screw defensively, thanks to her nice reading of the game and quick hands. While she didn't feature hugely in the Qualifiers, her ability to lock down opposing players and disrupt their rhythm, as well as step up to the plate by putting her body on the line for the team, makes her a tough player for coach Capobianco to overlook.

While the guard isn't likely to light it up on the stat sheet with big scoring numbers, the fact she is potentially ready to play at her third edition of the Final Round emphasizes her value as a team-player who can step into the backcourt and hold down what's needed at this level. Last season she elevated her game with a EuroCup Women debut for Ragusa and in one memorable game in the Quarter-Finals against Galatasaray, her double-digit haul showed she is capable of coming up with a big performance occasionally. However, Gorini remains primarily about adding her skills to the team in short bursts off the bench. Whenever she is given the nod, she will push the ball down the floor hard and is useful when the offensive tempo needs to be raised and transition scores are the key. Gorini loves all things vintage - namely sixties and seventies music, movies and clothes.

Back into the mix when coach Capobianco jumped into the playcaller's seat, Cinili offers experience in the frontcourt having played in both Turkey and Spain - as well as in her homeland. Her mobility, length and extensive shooting range are her main assets as she is a forward who loves to take defenders away from the basket to the three-point line. That also creates space for her teammates to exploit and if she doesn't go beyond the arc, she is comfortable spotting-up and knocking down jump-shots. Meanwhile defensively, Cinili can be a positive force when she is focused and always stands out from the crowd with her usually colorful hairstyles. She also has 11 different tattoos, including one on her back of a wolf - the symbol of her beloved A.S. Roma, soccer club.

Four years ago, Bestagno was suiting up in the second tier of Italian basketball and now she is averaging double-digits in EuroLeague Women minutes. Her last two seasons at Beretta Famila Schio have really opened people's eyes to her true value and potential. The forward was outstanding and won many plaudits for the way she quietly went about her business and yet made some serious noise with her fantastic shooting percentages which were borne out of her quality finishing around the rim. Even if she isn't a beast on the boards, it is that scoring touch which could prove gold for Italy. Not likely to be near the top of many scouting reports, Bestagno could well be labelled as a possible debut sleeper who might just shine in a frontcourt without the depth of many other Final Round competitors.

It has been a brilliant Sophomore year in the NCAA for Penna as she continues to turn heads Stateside with some seriously impressive numbers at Wake Forest where she has played more than 30 minutes per game. Her consistency has been excellent and at one point last season she scored at least 14 points in 11 straight games which captured her plenty of attention. It is not a surprise to those who have enjoyed her performances for her country at youth level and now she seems set for a senior tournament debut. Italy will certainly benefit from her mobility and shooting range which extends beyond the three-point line.

SLOVAK REPUBLIC

READY TO WEAR AN UNDERDOG LABEL AGAIN

Few nations are likely to land at the Final Round with such a strong underdog status as Slovak Republic, with some key absences making it look like it could be a rather challenging slog.

While newly appointed head coach Marian Svoboda will try to keep spirits high and ask the spine of his roster to step up in a big way, a lack of depth looks like it might deny them a route out of the Group Phase.

But Slovak Republic have been defying the odds for some time now and writing them off is a regular practice – they are entering their fifth consecutive Final Round so they know what it takes to be competing at the top table.

It's just this time they will be without the likes of Zsofia Hruscakova, Lucia Kupcikova, Regina Palusna, Eva Kmetova, Martina Kissova and Klaudia Lukacovicova.

Throw in the fact that EuroLeague Women star and champion Kristi Toliver won't be suiting up like she did when the team made a run to the brink of the 2015 Quarter-Finals and it's easy to see why they have been labelled as outsiders this time around.

But, they are still capable of causing an upset and have some real quality with Barbora Balintova in the backcourt, a strong performer for past seasons at Good Angels Kosice and the second-top scorer for her country at the previous Final Round.

The starting five will have some nice options in the paint, with another Good Angels player in veteran Anna Jurcenkova who will play center and look to clean up on the glass, as well as have a huge defensive role.

Perhaps the biggest cause of optimism will be the possible inclusion of Marie Ruzickova, who has been out of the national team picture for much of her career. The forward has played with Reyer Venezia in the Italian League and EuroCup Women in the past few seasons and has been a double-double waiting to happen.

She came back into the fray for the last Qualifiers window and her country could really do with her power and presence under the basket - with a recall for Romana Vynuchalova extending some much-needed length to the post-rotation.

There is also likely to be a significant job for veteran Zuzana Zirkova who had not been expected to suit up. But the 'golden oldie' and legend looks like she will be back to bring some firepower to the table in what is surely her final major tournament.

Drawn in a group with Italy, Turkey and Belarus, there is an argument to suggest Slovak Republic have got off lightly as their opponents all have their own issues to cope with.

The game against a possibly depleted Belarus will be particularly pivotal, so a move out of the Group Phase is not impossible. However, there is little doubt that after only picking up the coaching reins at the end of April and with few backcourt options to call upon, Svoboda and Co. have an uphill struggle on their hands.

Czech Republic 2017

COACH

MARIAN SVOBODA

Nationality: Czech Republic
Date of Birth: 01/09/60
Place of Birth: Brno (CZE)
Team 2016-17: Valosun KP Brno (Czech Republic-ZBL)
Club Career: Ostracolor Pardubice (Czech Republic-NBL, 2001-02); Valosun KP Brno (Czech Republic-ZBL, 2007-08); Basketball Brno (Czech Republic-NBL, 2009-10); Valosun KP Brno (Czech Republic-ZBL, 2012-17)
International Career: Slovak Republic Women (Head Coach, 2017-)

It will be a baptism of fire as a senior national team head coach for Svoboda, who has picked up the coaching reins of a team who would not have been a favorite even with a full quota of players. Now they will be even more of an underdog with a string of key absences and considering the playcaller was only appointed seven weeks before the tournament, he could have an impossible task on his hands to get the team out of the group stage. He does have some prior knowledge of his players from the Central European Women's League, where he guided Valosun KP Brno to a famous Championship success back in April. He has also served as an assistant with the Czech national teams and coached the youth teams both at U20 and U19 level so isn't a complete rookie when it comes to the international arena.

BARBORA BALINTOVA

Height: 1.79
Position: Point Guard
Date of Birth: 15/12/94

Career: Dannax Sport Kosice (Slovak Republic-Extraliga, 2011-12); Good Angels Kosice (Slovak Republic-Extraliga, 2012-17)
Instagram: barcika.balint

One of the most exciting players on the roster, Balintova loved her first major tournament two years ago when she got to work alongside the naturalized Kristi Toliver. The young Slovak guard led her team in steals and showed that although she is a playmaker, she can work in the two spot when needed as well, reaching double-digits in three-pointers made. With an excellent basketball IQ, strong handles and ability to exploit gaps in the defense in a flash, she is a hugely important figure. She now offers plenty of EuroLeague Women and EuroCup Women experience to build confidence upon at international level.

ANNA JURCENKOVA

Height: 1.95
Position: Center
Date of Birth: 26/07/85
Place of Birth: Presov
Team 2016-17: Good Angels Kosice (Slovak Republic-Extraliga)

Jurcenkova might have a good claim to be the most underrated and undervalued player in the whole of Europe, since her performances for both club and country have been relentlessly positive and productive. Now a great veteran player under the basket for a team who really does need such terrific leadership, consistency and reliability, it could be that nobody will be more important at the Final Round than their absolute rock under the hoop. For the past two FIBA EuroBasket Women Final Round tournaments, nobody in a Slovak Republic vest has shot the ball better, she has also been highly efficient and busy on the glass. After leading the way in rebounding at the previous Final Round, she repeated the feat in the Qualifiers, shooting a staggering 65 percent from the floor. She is truly a coach's dream, with everything done with maximum efficiency and minimum fuss. She is a great role model for the younger players and important in the locker room as well.

At this stage last summer, Slamova had spent her entire career at SBK Samorin and in a quest to spread her wings, she made a move to the ambitious Piestanske Cajky. It seems to have paid dividends, since she got to play briefly in EuroCup Women and lifted the Slovak Cup with her new team. Most importantly, she seems to have really taken her offensive production up in terms of quality and that has been mirrored in the last 18 months with the national team - averaging almost nine points per game. For a player who was widely heralded at youth level, it is a triumph to now finally be producing at senior level. It has also been her creation of opportunities for her teammates which has impressed and it might be enough for her to cement a Final Round debut.

A third straight Final Round looks inevitable for Baburova, who has been a player that has diligently performed a number of nice cameos during the previous two editions. It was a similar case on the road to FIBA EuroBasket Women 2017, when she was handed almost 22 minutes per game and featured in each fixture. That level of trust is because of her handling of the ball, defensive strengths and primarily because she doesn't feel the need to be a volume shooter. Big scoring contributions aren't what the swingman is about - she is more likely to bring some glue and ensure she works to allow others to shine. Baburova has a twin sister Alexandra who has also played at senior level and even briefly played during a couple of the Qualifiers.

About to embark on a highly impressive fifth successive Final Round adventure, Vynuchalova appears destined to make a belated return having not been part of the side that was successful in the Qualifiers. Her experience, combined with her scoring and rebounding capabilities, will bolster the frontcourt and adds much-needed depth. She is very adept with her mobility at drawing fouls and getting herself on the free-throw line. A graduate of Penn State, she has established herself as a standout frontcourt performer domestically in her homeland. She is following in the footsteps of her mother Jamila who also represented the national team, while Vynuchalova loves architecture, design and travelling.

It was a timely boost for Slovak Republic when one of their most talented players ended a lengthy hiatus from national team duties. Returning for the last two Qualifiers back in November, in her first slice of international action for eight years, Ruzickova could continue into what would be a second Final Round appearance for her country. The last four seasons in particular have witnessed her become one of the best players in the highly-rated Italian League where she is a huge favorite with the fans of Reyer Venezia. She has also excelled in EuroCup Women, with her scoring and rebounding ability often delivering double-doubles or getting her close to the feat. Her outstanding scoring ability in and around the hoop which is also highly efficient means that Slovak Republic could be more competitive than ever if she continues with the team.

The last few seasons have seen the rise to prominence of Piestanske Cajky who have played in EuroCup Women and a key part of that journey has included Dudasova. The shooting guard has grown with her team in the competition and in the Extraliga. Her displays have won her three appearances at senior level for her country in the Qualifiers, so she will be keen to hang on to her place and a Final Round debut. More than a shooter and able to create for herself and others off the dribble, she is adept at penetrating and kicking the ball out, as well as catching and shooting when she is on the receiving end of a pass. She looks a strong option coming off the bench if she gets the go-ahead to debut.

With her great length and wingspan, Remenarova is a flash between the baselines and has quick hands which makes her an asset at both ends of the floor. She also tends to slash to the hoop and look for the easy finish at the basket, rather than launching triple attempts - something which has facilitated an impressively efficient couple of campaigns in the ZBL at Valosun Brno. A youth star for her country, she was the leader as her country debuted at the FIBA U17 Women's World Championship three years ago and is now searching for a breakthrough at senior level. Despite not featuring in the Qualifiers, she looks to have all the tools she needs to ensure Coach Svoboda considers her inclusion.

Height: 1.91
Position: Center
Date of Birth: 31/07/99
Place of Birth: Nitra

Career: UKF Nitra (Slovak Republic-Extraliga, 2015-16); Piestanske Cajky (Slovak Republic-Extraliga, 2016-17)

A very nice prospect in the paint for Slovak Republic, there has been so much excitement about the teenager because of the way she has defied her tender years to impress with Piestanske Cajky. She turned heads last summer at the FIBA U18 Women's European Championship with a tournament double-double and that seems to have given her the confidence to excel in the pro-league. She works the low and high post non-stop and that movement means she is always able to exploit a pick-and-roll or catch the ball and seal the defender. But, whether she can make the step up at this stage of her burgeoning career remains to be seen. However, she might have enough promise to grab the last roster spot and even if not, she is tipped to be a senior team regular in coming years.

A very busy player on the court who is always moving to find the open spot on offense and working her feet defensively to get the best possible guarding position, Palenikova is far tougher and more savvy than many of her opponents may expect. Those elements have come together to persuade former Coach Kovacic to give the shooting guard more than 17 minutes per game in the Qualifiers. She also offers the bonus of being able to pick out a pass when she is not in shooting form and after coming close to making the cut for the Final Round two years ago, this time she is expected to make it. Her older sister Marta is also in contention to book a spot on the roster, having played at FIBA EuroBasket Women 2015.

A do-it-all forward who is one of the leaders at Piestanske Cajky, Oroszova has delivered in Extraliga since she completed a very successful time at Eastern Illinois. She starred in the NCAA as she started all 30 games during her senior year, leading the Panthers in scoring, rebounding, blocks and steals. Such capabilities are largely borne out of her athleticism and nice mobility in running the floor which would give Slovak Republic an extra dimension if they want to play a high-tempo style. Certainly it would be a surprise if Oroszova isn't suiting up at what is an overdue first Final Round assignment.

A genuine Slovak Republic legend, it was thought that she would never return to the national team after the previous edition of the Final Round. But, at the age of 37-years-old, she is out for one last swansong - even if she didn't feature prominently in the Qualifiers. She is a player for the clutch moments and has a sparkling resume at many of Europe's top clubs. At the international level, she has almost completed two entire decades after playing at the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup 1998. This is her sixth Final Round appearance, with sabbaticals seeing her skip the 2011 and 2013 editions. If she can score in bunches, create for her teammates and show she still has capacity in her legs defensively, she will be a huge asset.

ANGELIKA THEINER

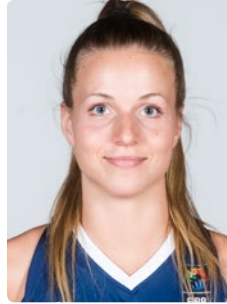

Height: 1.78
Position: Small Forward

Instagram: ajs_9

It was something of a surprise that Theiner was included in the squad last month, since she has not yet featured for the senior team. She signed off her participation at youth level five years ago and probably thought her chances of making a transition at the elite level might not come. Although still only 24-years-old, she has the chance to make up for lost time and has earned the call-up after a strong season at Poprad. Whether it is rebounding, shooting the three, or using her good reading of the game defensively, she could be a very viable and interesting addition to the roster if she makes the cut. On paper and based on her Extraliga performances, she looks capable of being an effective role player for her country.

IVANA JAKUBCOVA

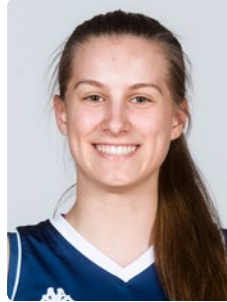

Height: 1.97
Position: Center
Date of Birth: 20/08/94
Place of Birth: Bratislava
Team 2016-17: University of Southern California (USA-NCAA)

Twitter: @IvanaJakubcova
Instagram: ivanajakubcova

With great size and speed, quick hands and plenty of upsides, the inclusion of Jakubcova on the candidate list for The Final Round was a real bonus for player and country. Having barely featured at youth level for national selections, and having spent a large chunk of her life in the States, the center is about to embark on her professional career back in her homeland with Piestanske Cajky. It therefore promises to be a huge calendar year for the player who has played at both the University of Kentucky and University of California.

NIKOLA KOVACIKOVA

Instagram: nikolakovacikova15

There is every chance that with Slovak Republic needing to turn a major page with the absence of many recognized stars, Kovacikova will be in the shake-up. Not least because she has enjoyed a tremendous individual season at Nitra where she has averaged almost 15 points per game and within those numbers is impressive consistency around her shooting. She impressed at youth level where she played for her country at the FIBA U17 Women's World Championship and could be ready to translate some scoring skills to the senior set-up. She can also take quite good care of the ball and rebounds very proficiently for her size.

TURKEY

CAUTIOUSLY TURNING THE PAGE

It feels like transition time for Turkey and that was always going to be the case with the retirement of the legendary Nevriye Yilmaz after last year's Rio Olympics.

Not that head coach Ekrem Memnun will be without experience, because fortunately for him, other veterans like Birsal Vardarli Demirmen have committed to continuing. This is a sizeable boost considering the scale of the void created by the departure of Yilmaz – both on and off the court.

Turkey had to endure that gut-wrenching buzzer-beater in the Olympic Quarter-Finals last year against Spain and while painful, it did at least suggest that predictions of a rapid demise might be exaggerated.

Of course, they haven't tested the water in a tournament situation without their former leader on the roster, so we will perhaps get a more accurate measurement of what lies in store during the short-to-medium-term, when the curtain falls in the Czech Republic.

The most critical decision leading up to the event has been whether to hand Lara Sanders the naturalized spot again in the paint, or go back to her predecessor Quanitra Hollingsworth, who has been fabulous for Yakin Dogu Universitesi and perhaps one of the most improved 'big's in the European game.

While Sanders has played at the last four major tournaments stretching back to the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup and done very well for her adopted country, Hollingsworth played a lot during the Qualifiers. There is also an interesting point around whether Esra Ural can expand her contribution and step up to the plate.

One real bonus for Turkey is that after looking like she was in danger of going stale at Galatasaray, forward Bahar Caglar looks like a player rejuvenated since last summer's move to Yakin Dogu and she looks like she has rediscovered her appetite for the game.

They can also continue to rely on the sublime guard play of Isil Alben, a premier playmaker who has been one of the main pillars for success since Turkey rose to prominence six years ago with a terrific run to the FIBA EuroBasket Women Final.

After an historic Olympic debut at London 2012, they took the last podium step at FIBA EuroBasket Women 2013 but have not gained a medal since – although thankfully they scraped to a spot at Rio last year, courtesy of their fifth-place finish at the Final Round in Budapest.

Ekrem Memnun has not been coaching at club level and has been pouring all his vast experience into watching the Turkish players, particularly the next generation.

Essentially, this is the main question for Turkish basketball right now. With one of the top domestic leagues not only in Europe, but also the world, many are concerned that not enough Turkish players are playing prominent roles.

Linked to this is the acid test that is about to come in terms of whether the next generation can evolve into new leaders and role models. If not at this tournament, then down the pipeline, but time is not on Turkey's side.

COACH

EKREM MEMNUN

Nationality: Turkish
Date of Birth: 16/07/69
Place of Birth: Sagmalcilar
Team 2016-17: Did not coach
Club Career: Galatasaray (Turkey-KBSL, 1996-02); BC Pristina (Kosovo-D1, 2003-05); Darussafaka (TBL, 2008-10); Galatasaray (Turkey-KBSL, 2012-16)
International Career: Turkey Women (Head Coach, 2015-)

One of the most respected and experienced playcallers in Turkey and indeed across Europe, Memnun has been at the helm of his country for the last few years, overseeing their qualification to, and participation at the Rio Olympics. He is even more focused heading into his second Final Round as he has not been coaching at club level, which means he has been given more time to watch players, in particular rising stars - as well as an extra capacity to plot out a pathway to more success. He wrote himself a page in the history books and was confirmed as a Galatasaray legend when he masterminded their stunning 2014 EuroLeague Women title. Known for his strong defensive ethos and organization, Turkey will have one of the best coaches around when they step out on Czech soil.

While not selected for Rio last year, the naturalized center played at the 2012 London Olympics, FIBA EuroBasket Women 2013 and in several of the Qualifiers for this edition, so remains a firm option. A hugely physical presence at both ends of the floor and a tireless worker off the ball who will constantly work opposing defenders to set offensive screens, her overall influence is always significant. If selected, Hollingsworth will compete to lead Turkey on the glass and is likely to also contribute double-digits in scoring. A former EuroLeague Women winner at UMMC Ekaterinburg and having played at the highest level through most of her career, her strengths can't be ignored and she was the major factor in Yakin Dogu Universitesi winning their first-ever EuroCup Women title and also a maiden Turkish Championship. There is no doubt she will be ready for all opponents, as she has majored in operations research. Quanitra also has a minor in computer science, was an excellent student at VCU and entered high school at the age of 11 after skipping two grades, meaning she graduated with honors at the age of 15!

With her astonishing number of followers on social media, that alone is evidence of the popularity of the distinctive Alben amongst Turkish fans, especially those who follow Galatasaray where she has spent most of the last decade outside of one season at Dynamo Kursk. She stands out not only because of her bleached blonde hairstyle, but also because she has the ball in her hands so often, dictating the tempo, pulling the strings and generally showing the kind of leadership needed from an experienced player who will be the centerpiece of the team. A EuroLeague Women champion at club level, she will have the responsibility of steering Turkey towards the podium. As well as her creative skills, she has an organized defensive game and, for her position, an extraordinary ability to forage for offensive boards. Off the court, she is a real animal lover and carries tins of food in her sports bag for street animals that she sees.

It has been a slow but steady journey into the international arena for Gunay, who was trusted with participation in all six of the Qualifiers. She continues to fulfill the role of back-up guard with real assurance and having been handed more minutes at club level last season at Bellona Agu than at any other time in her career, she arrives with confidence and an improved reputation. She worked with Coach Memnun at Galatasaray and so he knows her qualities well. Although she is not the most athletic, her basketball IQ helps her a lot and she has enough of a three-point threat to keep the defenders honest and chasing her. However, she has not featured in the big events since the Final Round in France during 2013 and so will be eager to get back in the major tournament mix. Gunay actually played center when she first played and also has dreams of being a lawyer.

Still waiting to be handed an appearance for her country in a Final Round, Bilgic will be concerned if she does not get the green light this summer. Especially because she will be turning 23-years-old next month and her eye-catching and at times breathtaking youth career is beginning to feel like a distant memory. Many felt she was a lock to make the transition to the senior ranks because of her ability to run the floor, her great technical skill-set and nice shooting action. It has been a big 12 months for the guard who made a move to Istanbul giants Fenerbahce last summer but has often been buried on the bench and she will be sweating on whether she has impressed enough, having featured in some of the Qualifiers. However, her excellent showing at the EuroLeague Women Final Four really turned heads and may have secured her a spot.

Another big favorite with not only the Turkish national team fans, but especially amongst Fenerbahce supporters, where she is a true legend after dedicating virtually her entire professional career to the club. Although she has built her outstanding reputation on her exquisite passing ability which has lit up many highlight reels at the elite level, Vardarli Demirmen is also able to slide to the two spot when required due to her ability to knock down shots from the perimeter. Such versatility combined with that veteran know-how is priceless and she led her country in assists at the Olympic Games last year. The Izmir-native is also one of the top five players for assists in EuroLeague Women history, which underlines her quality even more.

The 2016-17 club season has witnessed a renaissance for the forward who took herself out of her comfort zone at Galatasaray and has shown some great play at Yakin Dogu Universitesi in a remarkable season for the ambitious club. Perhaps in danger of going stale at Galatasaray, her switch to the other side of the Bosphorus Strait will perhaps also be the spark for a rejuvenated role with the national team, especially after she landed her second EuroCup Women title and helped Yakin Dogu to a first KBSL Championship. Her size and ability to matchup well with opponents, added to the fact she is hugely experienced at the international level, are all upsides which overshadow her lack of a perimeter threat. However, give her space to take a mid-range jumper and she will usually knock it down and punish you.

Another player who made her major tournament debut at London 2012, Turkey have always benefitted from her excellent offensive rebounding ability, quickness in the paint and ability to fast-break when coming off the bench. Canitez always promised plenty earlier in her career when she was named NAIA player of the year twice in a row at College, while also leading her team to the NAIA Championship with a double-double campaign. Her great mobility means that she is always involved in the thick of the action, but her problem has been a continued inability to find any significant minutes on a stacked Fenerbahce roster and therefore she may be a little under-cooked in term of her basketball evolution.

Granted Turkish citizenship five years ago, Sanders has been the number one choice in the naturalized spot during recent years and has repaid the faith with some towering performances. That has included finishing FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup 2014, the last edition of the Final Round and also the Rio Olympics as Turkey's leading scorer and rebounder. That tells a story of just how integral she has been and what a supreme powerhouse she is in the paint. Watch out for her cleaning up on the glass, going to work in the low post, stepping into space and nailing jumpshots, providing a defensive anchor and swatting shots. A EuroLeague Women, EuroCup Women and WNBA performer, Sanders is a top drawer player who is MVP material if she continues to represent her adopted country. Sanders was born in Germany, where her parents Sharon and Reece were stationed in the Army.

Even if she has been stuck in a long frontcourt queue in the star-laden Fenerbahce frontcourt, they signed her last summer because they know she is a very effective player at competing in short bursts and making quick adjustments. That also suits the national team, with Turkey having finally given her an opportunity to play at a major event last year for the first time as her Olympic dreams came true. Even if court time didn't come along in Rio, it is a green light that shows her she's on the radar and has a potential to remain in the squad. Very effective exploiting the pick-and-roll and with some nice moves under the hoop, it is probably because of her matchup capabilities at the defensive end which could see her handed a return ticket.

The veteran campaigner continues to do what she has done throughout her career and that is to provide the national team with a wonderful combination of stability during difficult times, as well as the ability to sink momentum-shifting triples. It may not always be during the clutch, but within any contest, the swingman so often has a decisive contribution to make. Her veteran leadership, unwavering dedication to any defensive assignment and unselfish commitment to Turkey's cause down the years makes her a role model both on and off the court to the new generation. She is an unsung hero who has never truly grabbed the headlines but her teammates and the coaching staff recognize her value and only ever speak about her in glowing terms. Now aged 35-years-old, this could be a deserved swansong. She loves extreme sports and also enjoys the city of Venice.

Whether Gulcan makes the cut and grabs herself a ticket to Czech Republic or not, there is every chance that she will establish herself as a senior team regular for many years to come. She has been not only consistent and impressive at youth level, she has got better each year for her country and signed off last summer with a typically efficient performance. At the powerhouse Fenerbahce for her entire career, she is approaching a crossroads. Now 21-years-old, she will need to prove that she has what it takes at the elite level. Buried on a deep bench at club level and having not played at a senior tournament, the time could be now for Gulcan. She can score in multiple ways, is an effective rebounder, works hard and is smart. She has the tools but also needs the platform to show she can be a potentially productive player.

The memories of being handed her debut at FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup 2014 on home soil while still a teenager is something that Senyurek will cherish forever. Since then, she has also taken her first steps at the Final Round and the Olympics. But after such a sparkling and exhilarating introduction, the time has come at the age of 22-years-old to start playing more minutes and producing. She has shown in the KBSL with Botas where she has spent her whole career so far, that she can be consistent and offer a scoring threat in the paint. She is still learning her post play and it is coming along nicely, but she already boasts a nice shooting range which incorporates downtown when necessary. If she can step up defensively and keep learning from her more experienced teammates, there is still hope that the center will be a permanent fixture in the senior set-up for the next 10 to 12 years. Senyurek gets a tattoo after every bad incident that occurs in her life. Let's hope she keeps the tattoo number as low as possible then...

Handed a dream debut with the senior team on home soil for FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup three years ago, followers of youth basketball were well aware of her dynamic capabilities. After all, she came within a whisker of making the FIBA EuroBasket Women 2013 roster when still a teenager. A do-it-all wing player who previously helped her nation to successive medals at the U20 European Championship for Women, she has the athleticism and physicality of a modern day small forward and can impact the game at both ends of the floor. Having come through the ranks at Fenerbahce, she now has two seasons under her belt at fierce rivals' Galatasaray. She played at FIBA EuroBasket Women 2015, but then missed out on the Olympics in Rio, so will be sweating on her return. Koksall is an animal lover who adopted a dog from a shelter and she also loves playing the drums.

It was only a matter of time before Cora knocked loudly at the door of the senior team, since she made plenty of noise for her country at youth level. She was handed her debut at FIBA EuroBasket Women 2015, before then rolling to the joy of a roster spot at the Rio Olympics. Even if she has not yet managed to establish herself in terms of minutes, she has managed to shoot the ball well in the time she has been given. At club level, her shooting skills have been transferred to Fenerbahce where she has demonstrated her full range, as well as the fact she can take very good care of the ball. She also played well defensively in the high-profile EuroLeague Women Final Four - playing a nice cameo role in getting Fenerbahce past favorites UMMC Ekaterinburg in the Semi-Finals.

Many people viewed the last edition of the Final Round in Romania and Hungary as a breakthrough tournament for Cakir after she came up with an array of memorable plays in almost 15 minutes of action per game. She showed she can hit some big shots at the elite level and has the composure to deal with the pressure moments. Her energy and spirit had never been in doubt - or her capacity to evolve into a leader, having been exactly that during her youth career. With a decade of tournaments still ahead of her, she will be looking to raise her game back to the standard of two years ago and cement her status as a genuine choice to start or finish games in the backcourt. The only issue has been that at club level, she moved from one stacked roster at Fenerbahce and has ended up in another at Yakin Dogu Universitesi - although her contributions in the thrilling Finals won against her former club have reminded everyone of her capabilities.

FRANCE

A GENERATION-DEFINING TOURNAMENT FOR A NATION IN TRANSITION

Searching for an impressive third-consecutive Final appearance and a fifth podium finish in a row, France are a nation synonymous with FIBA EuroBasket Women Final Round success.

But, after missing out on a gold medal in the past two editions – have they got what it takes to be crowned champions again after last making it all the way in 2009? Not least now they have shown a determination to welcome a new generation during this new Olympic cycle.

The biggest tick in the box is that they still have world-class talent to lead their charge, with Celine Dumerc and Endene Miyem boasting the quality and experience required to underpin a title bid in almost any situation.

As cornerstones of the team along with the likes of long-serving BLMA guard Gaelle Skrela, who like Dumerc, will hang up her international vest when the curtain falls on action in the Czech Republic, these veterans are now complemented by a fresh generation who are looking to truly take over from this point onwards.

Valeriane Ayayi was a teenager when surprisingly handed a place at the 2013 edition and has since developed into a top-drawer player, while the electric playmaker Olivia Epoupa has the 2015 FIBA EuroBasket Women Final Round and an Olympic Games to her name.

Then, there is the burgeoning talent of one of the most exciting rising stars in Europe to consider in the shape of Marine Johannes. The Tango Bourges Basket player was thrown an Olympic debut in Rio and showed glimpses of the power she could become one day.

Rightly or wrongly, all eyes will be transfixed on her after a breakthrough rookie EuroLeague Women campaign which bodes well for Les Bleues. But is it too much to expect her to become a difference-maker at the elite level? She may well have a breakthrough tournament in what will be her Final Round debut, but perhaps most importantly, she might answer the long-standing question mark over whether France have finally found themselves a go-to shooter.

With Dumerc back after that nightmare injury which was sustained on the eve of last year's Olympics, France should be able to take it up a notch. They will also be boosted by the possible inclusion of Diandra Tchatchouang who has also had some injury woes.

Another unknown factor is how the retirement of Isabelle Yacoubou will manifest itself. The only time they have failed to reach the Semi-Finals since their 2009 title, was at the FIBA Women's World Championship in 2010 and 2014 when the popular center was absent. Throw in the decision of Sandrine Gruda to skip this summer and there is no doubt there is a worrying void under the hoop.

At least Helena Ciak has shown she can continue to add something positive in the paint alongside Miyem after a nice first year outside of her homeland with Dynamo Kursk where she won the EuroLeague Women title.

The opening group is a potentially tough one for head coach Valerie Garnier and her players, but their track record suggests they will cope and it would be a surprise if the personnel they have at their disposal fails to fire them either near, or back onto the podium.

Even if they do have one eye on the long-term and might be labelled a nation in transition.

FIBA EuroBasket Women

Czech Republic 2017

COACH

VALERIE GARNIER

Nationality: French
Date of Birth: 09/01/65
Place of Birth: Cholet
Team 2016-17: Tango Bourges Basket (France-LFB)
Club Career: Temple-sur-Lot (France-NF1, 2005-08); Toulouse (France-LFB, 2008-11); Tango Bourges Basket (France-LFB 2011-17)
International Career: France Women (Assistant coach, 2012-13); France Women (Head Coach, 2013-)

There's no doubt that Garnier has continued the tradition of France being one of the world's leading basketball nations by ensuring they continue to challenge for silverware and pick up medals. Taking the reins after London 2012, she has landed in Czech Republic looking for a third consecutive FIBA EuroBasket Women Final after silver in the previous two editions. The consistency of France at major tournaments is largely down to her pragmatism and defensive tendencies, although with some exciting and dynamic younger players coming through, there is scope to change from a conservative approach to something more expansive. At club level, Garnier has delivered success with Bourges, including the 2016 EuroCup Women title.

ENDENE MIYEM

Height: 1.88
Position: Power Forward
Date of Birth: 15/05/88
Place of Birth: Reims
Team 2016-17: Baretta Famila Schio (Italy-A1, 2016-17)
Career: Centre Federal (France-NF1/2, 2003-06); Tango Bourges Basket (France-LFB, 2006-15); Dynamo Kursk (Russia-Premier League, 2015-16); Baretta Famila Schio (Italy-A1, 2016-17)
Twitter: @Endidi711
Instagram: endidi711

One of the first names down on the roster, if not the first, Miyem is an anchor for France because of her relentless work at both ends of the floor. She sets the tone for the team both defensively and offensively, with her hard-nosed approach complemented by often underrated skills which have been shining at the highest level for more than a decade with Bourges, Kursk and Schio in EuroLeague Women. When she is aggressive under the hoop or slices her way into the paint, she can be tough to stop and France will need her to put points on the scoreboard as well as working her usual magic on the glass.

A legend in her homeland, she is someone who has cut across into the mainstream media because of her profile and accomplishments. Dumerc is an ambassador for French basketball and one of the most instantly recognizable figures in the women's game, particularly in Europe. A world-class playmaker with outstanding defensive skills, her clutch play is also out of the top drawer. She has now got some WNBA court time on her resume, helping build on her profile which soared at London 2012 as she propelled France to the Final. She missed Rio 2016 with an agonizing last-minute injury, but last year did see her finally win a European trophy with her beloved Bourges during her farewell campaign. Due to the preparatory games, she is also likely to arrive as the most capped player in French national team history - passing the 254-game record of Paoline Ekambi. If not, she will hit the landmark here on Czech soil as the curtain falls on a legendary international career.

One of the most exciting young talents in Europe, the creativity and scoring ability of Johannes has made people sit up and take notice in her homeland during the last few seasons. After announcing her arrival on the international tournament stage with her breakthrough performances at Rio, alongside last summer's major move to Bourges, she is a star whose stock continues to rise. With great passing vision, deceptive quickness, gorgeous handles and a dose of good athleticism, the guard is never far away from the highlights reel and hugely exciting to watch. She is being tipped to emerge as a leader for her country in this new Olympic cycle.

Ciak is blossoming with age and her journey from the second tier of the French game has now taken her to Russia, with the center suiting up at Dynamo Kursk in the first season outside of her homeland. Now a genuine quality big in EuroLeague Women and causing matchup problems for her opponents at international level as well, she is showing it is never too late to improve. That has been very important as she admitted she lacked the focus and passion during her youth career when she regularly chose not to pull on a French vest. Highly efficient and productive under the hoop, Ciak also possesses nice hands and a good basketball brain, attributes which were honed through participation in FIBA 3x3 events.

The heart and soul of BLMA, the guard is a Montpellier legend because of her commitment to the cause since way back in 2004 and also because of the wonderful contributions she has made in catapulting the club to domestic silverware. While she arrived on the international stage relatively late, France have benefitted from her shooting skills and willingness to take care of the intangibles whenever she is on the hardwood. That mentality runs through the family veins, with her father Jean-Claude having coached the French Rugby Union team and her brother David also a professional rugby player.

If Minte is handed a Final Round debut, it would be quite something for a player who did not come through the traditional INSEP and federal youth structures like many of her peers, but instead honed her skills in the tough suburbs of the capital at the Paris 18 junior club. Tall, athletic and both a good rebounder and defender, Minte has plenty of upsides. She is always willing to do the dirty jobs for the team as her offensive game continues to evolve. She has known the likes of Marine Johannes since her youth days and has won great reviews for the role she has played in establishing Flammes Carolo Basket into a leading side in the LFB.

Historically on the fringes and having never quite nailed a final roster place, an unexpected opportunity arose for her last year when Bouderra was a last minute replacement in Rio. She had already been crowned LFB Player of the Year for two successive seasons and so her talent has never been in question - or her application at club level. Since playing at the Olympics, she has lifted her game into an even higher gear with some extraordinary displays for Flammes Carolo Basket in EuroCup Women, as well as in the French League. She is a legend in Charleville-Mezieres where the fans absolutely love her style and leadership. Now Bouderra is hoping she can hang on to her spot and make a splash in the Final Round.

Always great fun to watch, the phenomenal speed of Epoupa puts a bolt of electricity and dynamism into any game. She may lack the size of many of her peers, but being able to blast past players off the dribble or to receive passes with that extra second to make decisions is pivotal. A tough defender to shake off if you are an opposing guard, she has good recovery ability. Meanwhile, it's hard to believe she is one of the best backcourt rebounders in the women's game because of her leaping ability and speed of thought. As she learns to be a leader at club level with ESBVA-LM where she won the French title, playing the game with control and maturity is key if she wants to be a leader for France. She debuted in the previous Final Round two years ago and is likely to be on board again after impressing in Rio.

With her superb physical and athletic attributes, including an imposing wing-span, Tchatchouang is a particularly great option when France want to go with a bigger line-up in any game. She is looking to bounce back from a torturous double Olympics absence after being overlooked at London 2012 and then getting ruled out with an injury for Rio 2016. Her importance was underlined by being in the top three for minutes at FIBA EuroBasket Women 2015 and while not likely to drop big scores regularly, she continues to offer a strong and valued defensive presence. The only downside is that she has had to contend with the serious injury problems and that could cast a shadow over her durability in the context of intense tournament play.

She had to wait until she was 26-years-old before she finally got her opportunity in a major competition with the senior team, but now she is looking for her third tournament in a row after debuting at the previous Final Round and stepping out in Rio. A chunk of that delay earlier in her career was down to a decision to put energy into her studies as well as into basketball. A do-it-all swingman who can put points on the scoreboard in a hurry, she is capable of being a game-winner each time she steps out. She is also renowned for her defensive capabilities and for many years led the LFB in steals. With time still on her side, it feels like her best is yet to come in a national team jersey.

The winger rocketed to prominence when she was unexpectedly thrust into the limelight by former head coach Pierre Vincent at FIBA EuroBasket Women 2013 on home soil whilst still a teenager. Yet despite this early success, she has had a more difficult challenge in convincing Coach Garnier of her value and was left out of the final rosters in 2014 and 2015. But after reacting positively with some good play at Montpellier and in the WNBA with the San Antonio Stars, she was recalled for Rio and could show her shooting and rebounding ability. She can get seriously hot from behind the three-point line and if she maintains her focus defensively, there is nothing to stop Ayayi becoming a regular for many years to come. Just won back-to-back French Championship titles, last season with BLMA and this year with ESBVA-LM. Her younger brother is also now a national team player at youth level.

Place of Birth: Vitry-sur-Seine

The center is beginning to establish herself as a leading frontcourt player in the LFB, something which comes off the back of a very productive career for her country at youth level. She was in four Finals in her last four tournaments and scooped a pair of gold medals, with her country benefitting from her matchup potential defensively, size and nice finishing around the basket. Having made her senior debut during the FIBA EuroBasket Women 2017 Qualifiers and impressing in EuroLeague Women and domestically with new French champions ESBVA-LM, the uncomplicated but effective style of Gaye might just see her seal a major tournament debut.

The exciting shooting guard has been in the limelight this year after she was chosen by Minnesota Lynx in the 2017 WNBA Draft, with the franchise clearly impressed by the skills shown by her in FIBA youth competitions. Not only has the guard shone brightly in the various youth categories, but her dynamic play has been highlighted in 3x3 and she was MVP at the FIBA 3x3 U18 World Championship in Debrecen when France finished on top of the podium. With great shooting in her locker and a nice quickness that can get her to the hoop, she is also adept at handling the ball well too. It may be that this Final Round comes just too quickly, but she is a lock to be a part of an exciting medium to long-term future for Les Bleues.

The center has always reserved her best work for the global level and particularly at the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup. Her only appearance at a Final Round was back in 2013 and France are likely to continue capitalizing on her physical presence, rebounding skills and making smart choices on the floor. A former Young Player of the Year in her homeland, she is now a senior player and someone that can usually be relied upon for both club and country. And when it comes to club basketball, she has been a real cornerstone for ESBVA-LM riding their way to the French Championship title.

The forward has had a wonderful 12 months or so and rocketed to prominence with her displays for club and country. Chartereau landed the MVP award at last summer's FIBA U18 European Championship Women as France took gold and she won rave reviews for not only her productivity, but the way she made clutch shots and led her team. She then took her first footsteps with Tango Bourges Basket after a big move last year to the powerhouse and has done brilliantly. She enjoyed some standout displays in her rookie EuroLeague Women campaign and memorably posted a scintillating performance against eventual champions Dynamo Kursk in the Quarter-Finals to show she can do it regularly at the highest level. She has confidence, a great shooting range and is destined to join the ranks of some great French forwards down the years.

GREECE

THE 'GOLDEN OLDIES' ARE LOOKING TO ROLL BACK THE YEARS

It is tempting to write off Greece as their veterans prepare to wave goodbye to the international stage, but they have a habit of punching above their weight when it matters.

Two years ago, in the previous Final Round, they largely had their prospects doubted because of the ageing nature of their roster and a lack of emerging talent for those veterans to pass the torch to.

Yet, despite being without their former FIBA EuroBasket Women MVP, Evanthia Maltsi, they played superbly in Hungary and Romania, almost making the Quarter-Finals. They only just missed out and finished with a 4-3 winning record, which was better than five of the nations who finished above them.

With head coach George Dikeoulakos opting to end his impressive, albeit short reign, it was Kostas Keramidis who jumped into the hot-seat to oversee a generally positive campaign in the Qualifiers.

There is no doubt that Greece have world-class players they can still call upon when it comes to the long-serving spine of the team, which stepped out at both the Olympics and the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup.

But two years after concerns were expressed about their durability and longevity when it comes to producing on a stage like the Final Round, those voices will be even louder now the likes of Maltsi and Styliani Kaltsidou are both above the 34-years-old mark.

Yet, the Qualifiers showed that their powers might not be quite as faded as some fear, since Maltsi led the team in scoring and assists, and Kaltsidou was top rebounder.

Greece also have some players in the relative prime of their respective careers such as Artemis Spanou who is reliable in both scoring and rebounding, and will drop the anchor in the paint.

Many of the Greece side play together at the ambitious Olympiacos who excelled domestically but were left distraught when their EuroCup Women adventure and sizeable investment in playing personnel crashed via an unexpectedly premature exit from the competition.

This could also have an impact on the national team and manifest itself in two very different ways. It could be a concern in the context of a lack of high-level competition for several leading players during the 2016-17 club season, or provide an additional motivation to show they are a group that can still perform on the big stage.

Some shining lights of the current youth generation could also provide a timely boost, since big things are expected from teenage center Maria Fasoula, who has been exceptional at youth level. She spent last year lighting it up in the NCAA and featured briefly at the last edition - along with the similarly talented Eleanna Christinaki.

But, if Greece are to continue keeping the critics at bay, they must do it the hard way. They will be without their WNBA player Zoi Dimitrakou and the experienced Olga Chatzinikolaou, who was their deadliest player from the floor in the Qualifiers.

Additionally, on paper, it looks like the Draw has dealt them a cruel hand by pitching them against 2015 Finalists Serbia and France. That is something which makes their matchup against rookies Slovenia look like a do-or-die game from the outset.

Even with a group of veteran players at his disposal, it looked a tricky task for Keramidias to pick the baton up from his highly-rated predecessor George Dikeoulakos who took Greece to the brink of the Quarter-Finals at the Final Round two years ago. But, using his broad experience of coaching both men and women at club and for country, as well as youth teams, including the FIBA U21 World Championship, the playcaller has proven a very safe pair of hands. However, his real test is about to start as he tries to push on from an impressive campaign in the Qualifiers which almost returned a home win against the highly-fancied Russia.

There are few more trusted players in Greek basketball than the long-serving warrior in the paint who is preparing to make an appearance at the Final Round for a fifth time. While she may not possess the finesse of some other frontcourt operators, Kosma knows what it takes at the highest level, having won EuroCup Women with Sony Athinaikos - as well as her lengthy career with the national team. She will fulfill the same role as she does at club level with Athens giants Olympiacos, which is hustling under the hoop, crashing the boards, setting screens and snapping up putback opportunities when they arise. Defensively, she won't let any opponents take liberties or enjoy a moment of rest. Kosma is not only a soldier of the national team, but she also serves in real life, since she is a member of the Hellenic Coast Guard.

The veteran swingman is a former FIBA EuroBasket Women MVP after lighting it up in Latvia back in 2009 and a legend of women's basketball in Greece having also played in the WNBA earlier in her illustrious career. She was scheduled to make a return and have a swansong at the previous edition two years ago, but a serious injury ruled her out as she lost her race to be fit. Now she is ready to wave goodbye at 38 years of age in what will be her seventh Final Round. She has only once failed to register a double-digit scoring return at the tournament and it is that offensive power combined with her creative skills and extensive know-how that Greece will be delighted to benefit from - this one last time. Her work in the Qualifiers illustrated just how important she will be. Maltzi plays basketball as if it's the last time she will be on the floor. She is also known for living her life exactly the same way, enjoying not just every single day, but every single minute, making each day a unique experience.

Having always played against older and physically stronger players during her youth career in a Greek vest, Stamolamprou was nicely prepared for her NCAA career with Robert Morris. She could barely have done more to impress after becoming one of only two players in the school's history to register 1,000 points, 500 rebounds, 300 steals and 100 assists. She signed off as the NEC Player of the Year and is now ready to take her skills into the pro-game. The 21-year-old guard is happy to pull the strings or slide across and play the two position because of her shooting prowess. Her combo skills could see her becoming a long-term favorite, although to date, she hasn't really been given the chance she craves. That could all be about to change. You can tempt Stamolamprou with a good movie, but you can tempt her more easily if you give her any kind of travel ticket. And the destination doesn't matter. She has already travelled to so many places around the world and is always ready for one more destination.

ANNA SPYRIDOPOULOU

Height: 1.84

Team 2016-17: Proteas Voulas (Greece-A1)
Career: Megas Aleksandros (Greece-A1, 2005-08); Aris Thessaloniki (Greece-A1, 2008-11); Proteas Voulas (Greece-A1, 2011-12); Terpsithea Glyfadas (Greece-A2, 2012); Solna Vikings (Sweden-Damligan, 2012-13); AE Allinikou (Greece-A1, 2013-14); Proteas Voulas (Greece-A1, 2014-17)

Spyridopoulou has not played at a Final Round since 2011, when she defied the odds to win a place on the final roster off the back of a productive campaign in EuroCup Women with Aris. Now she looks set to suit up again and will be much better prepared for it with more experience under her belt and having showed her value as a role player during the Qualifiers with some very smart contributions in just under 10 minutes per game. In the Greek League she is a model of consistency for Proteas, scoring efficiently, continually combative in the paint and cleaning up on the glass. Just the kind of elements Greece will be hoping to continue benefitting from. Spyridopoulou is a talented soccer player and don't challenge her in any sporting situation as she will beat you in just about anything - including tennis, swimming and volleyball!

A trusted and experienced lieutenant of the national team, the playmaker was competing at her first Final Round way back in 2005 and has been a regular member of the set-up ever since. Adept at pulling the strings when normally coming off the bench in short bursts, Lymoura is a bundle of energy and knows how to turn up the heat on her opponents. Even if the three-point shot has never been her greatest weapon, she has become much smarter at picking her moments. Additionally, she looked after the ball better than anyone on the Greek roster at the previous edition of the Final Round and a similarly mature and intelligent campaign this time around would be warmly welcomed. Away from the court, Lymoura loves engaging in a bit of 'retail therapy' - whether is just 'window shopping' or buying something for herself or her friends.

STYLIANI KALTSIDOU

Height: 1.88
Position: Small Forward/Power Forward
Date of Birth: 12/01/83
Place of Birth: Thessaloniki
Team 2016-17: Olympiacos (Greece-A1)
Career: Galaxias Thessaloniki (Greece-Local Division, 1994-98); Propontida (Greece-Division B, 1998-99); Iraklis Thessaloniki (Greece-A1, 1999-00); Megas Alexandros (Greece-A1, 2000-02); Glyfada (Greece-A1, 2002-03); Esperides Kallitheas (Greece-A1, 2003-09); Tango Bourges Basket (France-LFB, 2009-14); Agu Spor Kulubu (Turkey-KB-SL, 2014-15); Tarbes Gespe Bigorre (France-LFB, 2015); ESBVA-LM (France-LFB, 2015-16); Olympiacos (Greece-A1, 2016-17)

One of the great Greek players of the modern era, Kaltsidou has a terrific resume playing in many of the top leagues around Europe, as well as in EuroLeague Women and EuroCup Women. She is also a cornerstone of the national team who has served her country with distinction and class throughout her impressive career. She has had big highlights like when she got hot from downtown at the 2010 FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup. Her leadership will be priceless once again in what could be her last major tournament appearance. Although judging by her fine form in the Qualifiers, she might not be ready to hang up her shoes just yet. She racked up 15 points per game and led on the boards, something which underlines that her appetite and abilities remain as eye-catching as ever. The key word for many athletes is psychology and Kaltsidou is known for cherishing this fact. She loves reading books about psychology and has mastered the difficult periods of her life because of this! Also with a little love and help from her dog Kobe (not Bryant), since playing with him relaxes her a lot off the court.

After an almost ever-present youth career for her country, the expected senior transition is yet to arrive for Diela, who has barely featured apart from some brief minutes in the Qualifiers for FIBA EuroBasket Women 2013. Now, she is hoping that another impressive campaign with Panathinaikos might be enough to force her way back into the reckoning. Her versatility is her biggest strength since she can help for short bursts at point guard, or slide to the small forward slot. She can post up on smaller opponents, and is a solid shooter from mid-range and the perimeter. She is also renowned for her work ethic - an ethic that proved useful when she juggled her basketball responsibilities whilst studying for her degree in philosophy. Great with children, Diela wants to combine her passion for basketball and children in her post-playing career.

Nikolopoulou was left thrilled when she finally got a taste of major tournament action at the previous edition of the Final Round. While she didn't manage to find her best gear offensively and struggled to make the most of scoring opportunities, she did enough to show she can play a backup role and has remained involved during the latest Qualifiers. Taking nice care of the ball during those games and also shining in a big way domestically last season with Proteas where she stood out with six assists per game, there is every chance that the guard will be given a role once more in the backcourt. Another player who loves her cooking, her teammates are lucky to have her around, since she even has her own signature dish. It's Greek and it's chicken giouvetsi. Don't try to pronounce it - just ask her for a sample to taste!

One of only a couple of players on the Greek roster who plays their club basketball outside of her homeland, Sotiriou comes into this summer off the back of a full campaign in the highly-rated Italian League at Battipaglia. Now also firmly in the veteran category, she offers nice flexibility as well as experience. Not only is she comfortable shooting the ball from outside, but she will mix it up inside if necessary as well, ghosting into the paint to pick up putback scores or to crash the glass. A strong defensive presence who has always been handed minutes by the various national team coaches she has played for, that trust defines the reliability she offers and the respect she commands by those around her. Sotiriou is known for her cooking skills and competes for the 'masterchef' title position with her teammate Angeliki Nikolopoulou. She recently mastered sushi prior to the preparation camp.

One of the most exciting teenage frontcourt players in Europe and destined to become a major senior team star, Fasoula has been lighting it up in the NCAA with Boston College. Having finished her Sophomore year, it's two impressive campaigns in the College game, which have come off the back of a stellar youth career and a senior debut in the 2015 Final Round when she was just 17-years-old. A towering presence with an array of effective moves on the block or exploiting a pick-and-roll situation, her potential is still huge. Her love for the game came via the desire to follow in the footsteps of her father Panagiotis Fasoulas, who was inducted into the FIBA Hall of Fame in 2016. Off the court, don't even ask Fasoula if she wants to dance as she will be already on the dancefloor, before you finish your question. And be ready to laugh as well, because her sense of humor is well-known. She absolutely loves her swimming too.

The veteran forward has drifted in and out of national team contention during her career and actually featured for Greece in the FIBA EuroBasket Women Final Round in Poland six years ago. The 32-year-old has been enjoying a renaissance with Olympiacos in recent seasons, helping them secure plenty of silverware and her contributions are appreciated by her teammates and the coaching staff. That is because she is a very understated player on the court, but her fantastic 60 percent shooting inside the three-point line and ability to drop triples beyond it, make her a realistic prospect. She is adept at being an effective role player for her club and that might just fit nicely into a return to national team action. If you see the players of the Greek team stepping out on the court looking great with nice hair or make-up, blame it on Stamati since she loves to help her teammates whenever they ask as it is a passion of hers.

An incredible 12 years after the player simply known as 'Roula' wore a Greece national team jersey at youth level, she may finally get to taste an unexpected senior tournament during what is now the twilight of her career. She has been one of the most consistent and respected players in the Greek League where she has played her entire career. If she can persuade Coach Keramidis to give her a dream ticket and a place on the end of the bench, it will be for her defensive play which is well-renowned. She is a regular in the All-Defensive Team of the Year in her homeland and if she is given an opportunity - look out for her work on the glass and quick hands that could help initiate some transition offense for her team. You can guarantee that Mouli will be well trained and in great shape. Not just because of basketball, but because she loves it and is taking her first steps as a personal trainer and be aware she is on the hunt for her first students.

The small forward earned a promotion to senior team duties just in time for FIBA EuroBasket Women 2015 and that came after an excellent time at youth level. She only featured in one of the games, but this time around, she is surely destined to play an expanded role after contributing nicely in her eventful NCAA career. She had been destined to go to Dayton, but ended up at the University of Florida and last season made the switch to the University of Maryland. She has put up big numbers Stateside and her scoring ability from the wings could prove valuable. She is likely to demonstrate a big improvement since the last Final Round. Christinaki can create music on the court and this is undeniable, but she can also create music also of the floor as she plays the piano and has had lessons for many years since she was a kid.

The forward has established herself as a rock-solid performer for her country and now as a reliable EuroCup Women performer. That is not much of a surprise to those who followed her jaw-dropping youth career in a Hellas vest when she posted some seriously incredible numbers at every turn. She played as a teenager at the Final Round back in 2011 and continues to grow in influence. She was excellent in the Qualifiers and Greece need that threat level to continue. Spanou never stops moving as she looks to exploit space on the floor. Watch for her jabbing out to the three-point line and slashing back through the paint. She is a hard assignment for defenders, can score in multiple spots, is good on the boards and possesses real quality. She played more minutes at the Final Round two years ago than anyone else and that might be something that is repeated this time around. Spanou has played with the seniors since she was 18-years-old and is a unique case, as she never played professionally in Greece.

The inclusion of Avery gives Greece a real boost at the point guard spot and because she is also a very capable shooter from long-range, the Panathinaikos star offers genuine combo capabilities. While she is a diminutive figure in terms of her physical size, she makes up for it with her skills and will be able to provide plenty of production - as well as creating for others. Playing at the point guard position, her job is to create a lot, but she also does it off the court in her own way. When Niki doesn't express herself through basketball, she does it through lyrics. She writes her own songs and has been pursuing a music career by rapping under the moniker of 'Bella BlahNik'. Avery is also a poster model who has appeared in two huge Nike campaigns. She starred in an NBA commercial with Grant Hill and Jared Dudley.

SERBIA

ROLLER COASTER RIDE NOT SLOWING DOWN FOR THE CHAMPIONS

Getting anywhere near the sensational heights of the past Olympic cycle looks like a tall order for Serbia. But, the reigning champions have shown they are at their most dangerous when being doubted.

Nobody will ever forget what happened two years ago in Budapest, as Serbia were crowned FIBA EuroBasket Women winners for the very first time – their golden glory enhanced even more by way of a direct route to Rio.

Then, after a horror-start at their first-ever Olympics and with almost everyone writing off their prospects, they recovered to win the bronze medal game and further cement themselves into mainstream Serbian media.

It was Marina Maljkovic who presided over the fairytale, somehow managing to successfully manipulate a locker room with so much personality, a task which many other coaches would have seen blow up squarely in their face.

However, things could have been so different, with Maljkovic and her team coming so close to being eliminated at FIBA EuroBasket Women 2013, before turning things around to go on a winning run which resulted in them making the Semi-Finals. They made a debut at the FIBA Women's World Championship a year later and were unfortunate not to make the last four.

With veteran guard Milica Dabovic having retired and Maljkovic opting to also call it day after a stuttering Qualifiers campaign which witnessed a pair of losses against Ukraine, it's now Stefan Karadzic who has the unenviable task of trying to somehow sustain their incredible momentum.

With Sonja Petrovic to lead the way – anything is possible and they can't be discounted because few players possess the world-class skill-set of the forward. Her return to the fray for FIBA EuroBasket Women 2015 was arguably the main reason for Serbia's historic triumph.

Yet the MVP award was handed to Ana Dabovic, who erupted at the event and was the difference-maker needed to catapult her country to a new tier. Now also a WNBA champion, she will be dangerous once again because she can score in bunches and is like a runaway train if she gets hot early.

Jelena Milovanovic is also a proven game-winner and she led the team in scoring during that memorable Olympic medal run in Rio.

While a major strand of their success has been due to the naturalized Danielle Page, who is sidelined with a serious injury, Serbia can still rely on other rock-solid role players. Especially the likes of unsung heroes such as Tamara Radocaj and Nevena Jovanovic who continue to step onto the hardwood and contribute.

Another reason for Serbia to believe they can, and indeed will challenge for more medals, is forward Aleksandra Crvendacic. One of the best young prospects in Europe, who now has her youth career signed off and a dream senior debut in Rio under her belt, she must be the one to pick up the baton in the medium term and establish herself on the international stage.

It continues to be an exciting time for Serbia and after everything the group has experienced, including inspiring the next generation, they will want to pen a notable new chapter – even if it means turning a few new pages in the process.

COACH

STEVAN KARADZIC

Nationality: Serbian
Date of Birth: 16/01/60
Place of Birth: Niksic (MNE)
Team 2016-17: Did not coach
Club Career: Crvena Zvezda (Serbia-A, 2000-2008); Hemofarm Stada Vrsac (Serbia-A, 2008-10); Enisey Krasnoyarsk (Russia-PBL, 2010-15)
International Career: Serbia Women (Head Coach, 2017-)

It looks like a thankless task to be stepping into the giant shoes of his predecessor Marina Maljkovic whose historic and jaw-dropping success in the past few years will be hugely difficult to replicate. Whether he is a short-term or long-term appointment will depend on whether he can deliver a top-five finish and that is additional pressure. Unusually, he has been appointed despite having had barely any experience in the women's game. Karadzic is best known for his time with the men's team in Enisey Krasnoyarsk which not only competed in the Russian League, but also in European competition. He has also coached Crvena Zvezda and Hemofarm Stada Vrsac in his homeland and has plenty of experience of coaching Serbia at various youth levels.

Another top-drawer player on the Serbian roster, Milovanovic has been a regular top performer in EuroLeague Women throughout her distinguished career which stretches back a decade from when she was a teenage talent at the Final Four with Sopron. Her WNBA pedigree and accomplishments in Europe have now been complemented by her offerings with the national team. She remains a go-to player in crunch time and isn't afraid to jack up a shot from anywhere on the floor, which has seen her post some eye-popping scoring returns. A big favorite at Perfumerias Avenida in Spain last season, she may not have the athleticism, but her size, shooting range and ability to get it done at the business end of games means she will continue to be a big factor. Off the court, Milovanovic is the 'fast and furious' member of the team. She loves fast cars and would like to travel around the world in a good car and with good company.

Rated as one of the best European players in the women's game, the return of Petrovic after a six-year absence from a Serbia vest coincided with that glorious first-ever EuroBasket Women title in Budapest. It was no coincidence that a big chunk of that maiden gold was down to her incredible list of upsides. Indeed, 2015 was the greatest of her career as that memorable night in the Hungarian capital came only months after winning a historic EuroLeague Women title at ZVVZ USK Prague. The forward is a brilliant leader for club and country, utilizing her experience and ability to score in so many different ways. She can skip to the hoop, make clutch plays and is overloaded with court smarts - making her basketball's equivalent of the finest quality 'swiss army knife'. Best of all, there is very little ego and she doesn't always feel the need to take over, but will be intelligent enough to let someone else get the glory. She is a world-class player who also has several WNBA seasons to her name and if she clicks into top gear, so will Serbia. However, sharing a room with her as a teammate can be tough, since she sleeps with the television turned on.

After her shock inclusion as a teenager at the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup 2014, Mandic didn't make it to the 2015 Final Round or Rio. Perhaps that contributed to her decision to move outside of Serbia and it seems to have paid dividends as she has shown she can cut it in EuroCup Women and the Hungarian League with PEAC-Pecs. The retirement of long-serving playmaker Milica Dabovic reduces the queue in front of her and with opportunity now knocking louder than ever, she may be able to convince Coach Karadzic she can be a successor to the veteran. Mandic is a big lover of tattoos and already has plenty on her body.

With her lethal three-point shooting and reliable defensive qualities, Cado has been an integral part of Serbia's core rotation and played very healthy minutes at last year's Olympic Games to underline the point. She was one of the best shooters in Rio and combined with some good decision-making, should have done enough to continue impressing in a national team vest. She is even more prolific at club level where she has carved out a good career in the past three years in the highly rated Turkish League. Cado previously played with Bosnia and Herzegovina at youth and senior level and was born in Sarajevo. Off the floor, she is the one most likely to pick up a microphone and sing some songs.

The hype around Stankovic was considerable when she represented Serbia at youth level and that was ramped up even further when she was included in the WNBA draft and chosen by San Antonio. Disappointed to miss out on a spot for the Final Round in 2015, she is looking for a FIBA EuroBasket Women debut which would come off the back of last year's Olympic dream coming true in Rio. A very nice shot-blocker with enhanced mobility compared to many of her peers, she can have an impact in the post, either facing up or with her back to the basket. She enters the mix off a season back in EuroLeague Women and EuroCup Women with Hatay.

Benefiting from a season in the demanding Russian Premier League with Chevakata, the playmaker will be even better equipped and prepared to continue pushing for minutes in the Serbian side. Very much one of the unsung heroes and supporting cast behind the headline makers of the last Olympic cycle, Radocaj is a very capable point guard who is quick and creative. Her greatest asset is that she has outstanding composure and will not be knocked out of her stride easily. While she may not pose problems from downtown, she has enough in her locker with her organizational skills and passing ability to still direct the traffic from the backcourt when needed. Radocaj likes to play the dice game 'Yacht' and to beat her teammate Nevena Jovanovic.

One of the deadliest snipers around, opponents need to keep Jovanovic locked down because she can do some serious damage from long-range. Usually coming off the bench, but very much part of the main rotation, she is always active around the floor and makes smart decisions as well as dropping the three-ball at regular intervals. She can play the high-tempo and can be quite aggressive for a shooter when she needs to be, as well as visibly being one of the hardest workers on the roster. She has shown at club level how much offense can be derived from her game with some very nice numbers in Turkey and France. She is also a very underrated passer of the ball so look out for her creative side too. When she isn't shooting the ball, she will be holding a good book or listening to some great music away from the sport.

It's all about dedicating herself to the team for Krnjic, who is bracing herself for a fifth consecutive major tournament appearance. She brought her muscle and hustle to the table during the phenomenally successful last Olympic cycle when she was regularly given minutes off the bench. Having played constantly in EuroCup or EuroLeague Women since she was just 16-years-old, she already has almost a decade of experience at the top level - most of which has been spent with Sopron. While she may not produce big scoring returns, she makes up for it with plenty of thirsty work on the glass and screens off the ball to get her colleagues open. Krnjic likes to discover interesting destinations and new cultures - as well as adoring roller coasters.

It has been a barren six years at international level for the center who hasn't been able to make the move into the senior ranks after last featuring in 2011 at the FIBA U20 Women's European Championship. However, her superb double-double season in EuroCup Women with Aluivent Miskolc seems to have reminded everyone that she is not only around, but willing and most importantly, very capable of playing at the highest level. She is fiercely competitive and that feeds into one of her most recognizable upsides, since her aggressive approach and instincts have made her into one of the very best offensive rebounders in the women's game. She averaged almost four per game in the Hungarian League and EuroCup Women which is a jaw-dropping number and one of the reasons she might get the nod. Jovanovic has a passion for the theatre and also loves sitting by a river and watching it flow by.

While the center didn't feature last year in Rio, she was part of the gold-medal-winning side two years ago in Hungary. But it was at the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup 2014 where Ajdukovic showed what she is capable of, with some clinical finishing around the basket. She has great height and length which gives plenty of rebounding and shot-blocking opportunities. Also able to exploit pick-and-roll situations, Ajdukovic is looking to get back into the mix - even if her club career has seen her jump around and not able to settle anywhere for more than one season. Maybe this is because she loves to travel.

Labelled as the future of the Serbian national team, Crvendakic is one of the best players of her generation in Europe and in addition to the various youth medals and personal accolades, she is also a proven EuroLeague Women player. Despite her tender years, she led Sopron in scoring and rebounds during her rookie campaign and has continued to shine. While much of her youth career was spent in the power forward position, she is more likely to be found at the three spot. She is fun to watch because in addition to her own scoring ability, she has such a great eye for a pass and will often come up with some nice inside dishes. Her positive attitude is also a big bonus and after a major tournament debut in Rio, she is ready to rise up the pecking order of the senior side. Off the court, Crvendakic loves to read books and spends time playing the board game of Monopoly with her sister.

It seems almost incomprehensible that having celebrated her 30th birthday earlier this year, one of the most naturally talented Serbian players in recent memory still hasn't stepped out at a senior major tournament with her country. Yet she played in a FIBA U19 Women's World Championship and racked up the points to suggest she would be a cornerstone of the future senior team. It is also despite an eye-catching club career, which has seen her represent a number of leading teams, with regular minutes in EuroLeague Women. The small forward does have a lot of class and could yet prove herself to be the ultimate late bloomer and FIBA EuroBasket Women debutante. Knezevic is also a keen participant in rafting.

Aside from a handful of outings with the senior team during two qualification campaigns in 2010 and 2012, Skoric has missed out on the wonderful journey Serbia have undertaken in the last Olympic cycle. But, she has shot herself right into the center of the radar and showed she still has so much to offer after a sparkling season at VBW CEKK Cegled. She was the centerpiece of a brilliant run by the rookies in EuroCup Women, winning rave reviews for her all-action contributions. She can score inside and out, rebounds very well and best of all, provides flexibility defensively. She could provide solid back-up on the wing and has a genuine chance of continuing her good work from the club season into the international summer and getting herself a major tournament debut. Skoric adores her very big family and likes trying out extreme sports.

It has been an incredible couple of years for the explosive Dabovic who is like a runaway train when she gets on a hot streak like at the Final Round in 2015. The reigning FIBA EuroBasket Women MVP not only dazzled in Budapest with her sensational sequence of game-winning performances, but also went on to land a WNBA title at Los Angeles Sparks last summer. Her best work came under former head coach Marina Maljkovic and if she continues to get the green light to go to work on offense, she will be a leading contender once again in the scoring charts and might pose another strong MVP challenge if Serbia is to do well. While she didn't quite catch fire at the Olympics, don't be surprised if that now famous Dabovic hot-hand is back on show. Meanwhile, having previously attained success with her older sister Milica, she must now get used to being around the court and locker room without her recently-retired sibling. As well as basketball itself, her greatest passion is speaking with people and especially young women, to encourage them to follow their dreams.

What the diminutive point guard lacks in athleticism and size, she more than makes up for with her hard-nosed approach to defense and terrific passing skills. A regular standout for Serbia during her youth career which wrapped up in 2014, she has not been able to breakthrough at senior level. But, that is about to change after the completion of a third-straight year in the Spanish League and the best season of her pro-career. The loss of some players such as Milica Dabovic and Dajana Butulija, as well as a new head coach have opened a door and the playmaker could be about to walk through it. She has turned heads with more than four assists per game in Liga Femenina and may finally be about to live up to the hype she had as a 15-year-old making her debut with the national team in the youth ranks. As well as enjoying spending time with both her brother and sister, Stanacev also enjoys indulging in some singing.

SLOVENIA

QUALITY CHEMISTRY FUELLING THESE NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

For the first time in its history, the Final Round will welcome Slovenia. Now, after waiting so long for that precious ticket, they will be intent on soaking up every second of the experience.

However, do not be fooled into thinking that Slovenia are here for the ride and are FIBA EuroBasket Women Final Round tourists. These new kids on the block have what it takes to make people sit up and take notice.

Just ask Lithuania who they dumped out in the Qualifiers, or Latvia who eventually made it but were also almost sunk by this dangerous Slovenia team.

One glance at the backcourt alone and it's easy to see why nobody will be daring to take the rookies lightly. Former teenage phenomenon and now established EuroLeague Women champion and big-hitter with UMMC Ekaterinburg, Nika Baric, will finally get to play at a major international tournament at senior level.

The classy guard will lead the way and looks set to shine alongside Teja Oblak who is renowned as one of the most improved playmakers in Europe after turning heads in the past few seasons in EuroLeague Women and EuroCup Women with Good Angels Kosice.

If you think they have waited a long-time to reach the Final Round, spare a thought for the great veteran duo of Maja Erkc and Sandra Pirsic. The former is very much the heart and soul of Slovenia – both on and off the floor. She brings leadership, a scoring touch and vast experience, while Pirsic will offer a valuable anchor in the paint.

The pair have been brilliant at what has become a Slovenian enclave at Atomeromu, the club who shocked everyone by finishing top of the Hungarian League. The side also includes the highly-rated Eva Lisec, which means even more synergy for Slovenia.

There is little doubt that as a starting five, Slovenia can compete with real aplomb and vigor, but a limited rotation and depth – at least in comparison to their peers, means they will need 'Lady Luck' on their side.

But, with other nations from their corner of Europe, Montenegro, Croatia and Serbia, all rising to the fore in the modern era, they know they can follow suit and punch above their weight. Crucially, they have Damir Grgic at the helm who knows Slovenian basketball inside-out at all levels and has been rightfully heralded for masterminding this hugely exciting new chapter.

A lack of depth outside the core is also perhaps why they are looking to utilize Shante Marie Evans in the naturalized position. It is a risky strategy to some, given she did not feature in the successful Qualifiers and care will need to be taken not to upset the winning formula and the delicate eco-system around the camp. At least she knows coach Grgic from club level.

Slovenia have delivered success by just getting this far, but it isn't mission accomplished just yet. As they jump into Final Round waters, they will get to see whether they sink or swim and much will hinge on whether one or two bench players can emerge from the pack.

Reaching the last eight will be a tough ask, but they will relish their role as underdogs. The message remains very much around ignoring them at your peril, because they have such a special kind of chemistry and momentum behind them right now.

COACH

DAMIR GRGIC

Nationality: Slovenian
Date of Birth: 20/11/79
Place of Birth: Trbovlje
Club Team 2016-17: Athlete Celje (Slovenia-SKL)
Club Career: Athlete Celje (Slovenia-SKL, 2010-17)
International Career: Slovenia Women (Head Coach 2015-)

For the last decade, Grgic has been at the heart of Slovenia developing some great young players and that has been fundamental in carrying them to a historic first ever place in the Final Round. The playcaller coached many of his players previously, with the national youth teams - prior to making his splash at the senior level. His role in developing young talent has also fitted hand in glove as head coach of Athlete Celje which has an outstanding reputation for harnessing young talent and winning silverware along the way. It is no coincidence that the man who knows more about Slovenian women players than anyone else was at the helm as they punched their ticket for the very first time.

It has been a superb rise to prominence in recent years by the point guard, who has established herself as a premier performer in EuroCup Women and has also done the business in EuroLeague Women at Polkowice and Kosice. As well as her creative ability which manifested itself in the Qualifiers, Oblak can also score in a multitude of different ways, whether penetrating to the hoop, making space for herself off the dribble or with her feet set from long range. She comes from a sporting family with her younger brother Jan a goalkeeper with Spanish soccer giants Atletico Madrid. Teja also loved soccer and used to score goals past him. Jan has mentioned on many occasions how she has scored more goals against him than Lionel Messi or Cristiano Ronaldo.

There has rarely been a player who has excited as much as Baric at youth level when she was playing at the FIBA U16 Women's European Championship aged just 12. She won three MVP awards in a row - although her first love was soccer, which she played against boys. She is the first Slovenian to be drafted to the WNBA and was also quickly snapped up by Sparta&K M.R. Vidnoje, where she found herself playing in a EuroLeague Women Final Eight. A couple of years later and she was crowned a champion when she moved to UMMC. A great playmaker who leads Slovenia whenever she is on the floor, the importance of Baric was underlined in the Qualifiers when she handed out five assists per game. She is adept at making jump-shots and if she can also find her form from downtown, she can be a difference-maker. She has already participated in 18 FIBA competitions, has a younger brother who is also with the national teams and has even managed to beat Thyroid cancer.

ZIVA ZDOLSEK

Height: 1.78
Position: Shooting Guard/Small Forward
Date of Birth: 10/10/89
Place of Birth: Celje
Club Team 2016-17: Triglav (Slovenia-SKL)
Career: ZKK Merkur Celje (Slovenia-SKL, 2003-06); Koz Afrodita (Slovenia-SKL, 2006-07); ZKK Merkur Celje (Slovenia-SKL, 2007-08); Triglav (Slovenia-SKL, 2008-17)

Approaching a decade at Triglav where she has established herself as something of a club legend, the do-it-all style and leadership of Zdolsek has her cemented as one of the most respected players in the Slovenian League. Whether it is scoring, rebounding or setting an example on defense with her nice reading of the game and quick hands, she is always at the center of the action. While her tasks with the national team are more about being a role player coming off the bench, those fundamentals and work ethic make her a solid and reliable option. She also undertakes work as a physiotherapist in a local hospital and yet never misses a game for club or country. She loves running and riding her bike and when not at work or playing basketball, she will be enjoying nature somewhere.

SANDRA PIRSIC

Height: 1.95
Position: Center
Date of Birth: 11/10/84
Place of Birth: Kranj
Club Team 2016-17: Atomeromu (Hungary-A)
Career: Lek Jezica Ljubljana (Slovenia-SKL, 2004-06); Universitat de Barcelona (Spain-LF, 2006-07); Cadi La Seu (Spain-LF, 2007-08); IBIZA-PDV (Spain-LF, 2008-11); Rivas Ecolpolis (Spain-LF, 2011-12); ESBVA-LM (France-LFB, 20012-13); CD Zamarat (Spain-LF, 2013-16); Gernika Bizkaia (Spain-LF, 2016); Atomeromu (Hungary-A, 2017)

The veteran center will finally get the chance to test herself in a Final Round. Her presence is vital as she not only brings know-how, but a strong physical presence which will be priceless in matching up defensively in the paint. She has spent much of her club career in Spain, before joining some of her Slovenian teammates at Atomeromu last season. She was the best player during the Qualifiers, leading her team in rebounding and shooting a fabulous 60 percent from the floor. Pirsic was the first Slovenian to play at EuroLeague Women Final Four and her sister Masa is a skilled 3x3 player. She loves animals and helping out in animal shelters. She speaks seven languages and is now learning Hungarian and Basque. She has also played a supporting role in a Basque movie.

Offering a scoring boost from the wings because of her smooth shooting ability, especially from three-point territory, Abramovic will be brought off the bench to inject some extra firepower. She has consistently been a leading light in the Slovenian League and was always on course to be a regular in the senior national team because she was one of the most prolific performers for her country throughout an eye-catching youth career. She is capable of handling the ball when needed and could see her influence growing if she gets rolling quickly by making some early shots. When she was younger, Abramovic played basketball against boys and was very successful. She also practiced gymnastic and dancing, so whenever music is played around her, she can't help but start moving.

ANA LJUBENOVIC

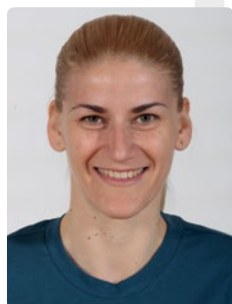

Height: 1.84
Position: Power Forward
Date of Birth: 06/05/88
Place of Birth: Ljubljana
Club Team 2016-17: San Salvatore Selargius (Italy-A2)
Career: Panter Ilirija Ljubljana (Slovenia-SKL, 2005-06); Odeja Skofja Loka (Slovenia-SKL, 2006-09); Triglav (Slovenia-SKL, 2009-12); Interclub Muggia (Italy-A2, 2012-13); Energia Virtus Cagliari (Italy-A2, 2013-15); San Salvatore Selargius (Italy-A2, 2015-17)

The forward has proven something of a late bloomer on the international stage after taking her chance to show during the Qualifiers that she is worth a place on the bench. Having previously had little involvement with the senior side, she has impressed Coach Grgic with her aggressive approach offensively. Ljubenovc is skilled at drifting to the perimeter and then putting the ball on the floor for a power dribble to the hoop, especially with her left hand. As well as making scores at the hoop, that determination and strength regularly draws fouls and she has shown after five years in Italy she can do a job on the glass as well. Ljubenovc loves seafood and is currently studying the Sardinian language to add to the four languages she already speaks.

MAJA ERKIC

Height: 1.83
Position: Shooting Guard/Small Forward
Date of Birth: 13/05/85
Place of Birth: Slovenj Gradec
Club Team 2016-17: Atomeromu (Hungary-A)
Career: ZKK Merkur Celje (Slovenia-SKL, 2003-07); Real Celta Vigo (Spain-LF, 2007-08); Faenza (Italy-A1, 2008-10); Beretta Famila Schio (Italy-A1, 2010-12); Rivas Ecolpolis (Spain-LF, 2012-14); Athlete Celje (Slovenia-SKL, 2014-15); Passalacqua Ragusa (Italy-A1, 2015-16); Atomeromu (Hungary-A, 2016-17)

The leader of the national team for so long, her dream has come true and she will finally step out at a Final Round. It promises to be an emotional time for the veteran who has played all over Europe in the top leagues. Most recently, she has been at the heart of a fine season for Atomeromu in Hungary, continuing to show her three-point shooting skills. But the swingman is also a fine passer and will marshal the defense when needed, grabbing more steals than any of her younger colleagues during the Qualifiers. A huge presence on and off the floor, she will probably play more minutes than anyone else which reiterates her value. With 63 appearances, she is second in the All-Time list for the national team, was an ambassador at the FIBA U18 Women's European Championship and is participant in the FIBA 'Time Out' Project. She also came to the game late when a teenager but was so good that after just 14 days of practice, she made the national youth team.

After spending most of her career playing in Slovenia, Rupnik has been harvesting new experiences in Germany and Spain in the last three years and will be hoping she has done enough to get back into the national team mix. The competition is intense and she will have to fine-tune her three-point radar if she gets her opportunity again - although she is also a competent ball-handler and brings experience of previous qualifying campaigns when she played plenty of minutes. Known as one of the most fun and popular players around the team, she is always smiling, but is likely shy and spends all of her free-time discovering the world with her closest friends.

With her physical strength, height and technical ability, Liseč has all the attributes to eventually deliver on the huge promise she showed at youth level when she was the marquee player of her generation for Slovenia. Crowned MVP of the Slovenian Finals, it helped her grab a move to EuroLeague Women side Schio, before moving on, to post big numbers in Hungary with Atomeromu. A good finisher with either hand around the hoop, she can be clinical in the paint and also runs the floor well in transition for her size. Such efficiency and talent make her an important player and if she can continue to rebound well and hold the anchor defensively, it will be a big bonus. She has to avoid foul trouble though as Slovenia need her on the court. Liseč was originally a skilled handball player who was invited to the youth national team and she didn't even play basketball until late in high school. She has twice been voted best athlete in her hometown and she is never far away from her beloved smartphone.

Making a break from competing in her own domestic league, Jakovina comes into the summer boosted by a fruitful first club season in the second tier of Italian basketball. She has been able to showcase her scoring and rebounding potential and having only briefly tasted court-time in the Qualifiers, will be pushing to snatch a place on the bench for the Final Round. She has done a great job for Vicenza on the boards and her importance was emphasized by the huge amount of minutes she was handed. Now she could be ready to persuade Coach Grgic into handing her a spot on the final roster. Jakovina has excelled in her studies as well as basketball, graduating in architecture.

Very often the first port of call on the bench for Coach Grgic when it comes to needing a backup player in the paint, Trebec will be relied on to continue her dedication to the team ethic. Renowned for her unselfish work away from the ball and willingness to hustle her opponents at the other end of the floor, she is an effective role player. She also has the ability to knock down a triple if she is left open and inside the paint she can back down her defender on the block. Her opponents should also know that trying to intimidate her or even get too physical on the court is not a good idea, since her first love was always karate!

There's great hope for Slovenian basketball moving forward, that they have unearthed a fantastic scorer in the shape of Prezelj who has been prolific to say the least at youth level with some huge numbers. A big talent, she can score all over the floor and has shown that once she gets on a roll she is tough to reel back in and shut down. Her devastating three-point shot is her biggest asset, while she is always willing to drive hard to the hoop. Having been given a handful of minutes in the Qualifiers, it remains to be seen if this tournament has come too soon, and whether Prezelj still has work to do on the defensive end before she is given her big chance. Prezelj hails from a sporting family as her father was a soccer player, her mother trained in track and field, while her brother is a young basketball referee. She has won medals in many sports, including being a two-time national champion in 'sport-aerobics'.

Potentially adding athleticism and a good physical option in the paint and on the wing, the inclusion of Evans as a naturalized player will be seen something of a gamble. There is no doubt she offers an added scoring threat, can really provide an uplift on the boards and be a go-to option inside, but it might boil down to how the forward integrates. Having not played in the Qualifiers, she will need to strike the right balance in terms of her contributions for a team that was successful in punching their ticket, but a good relationship with Coach Grgic at Athlete Celje should go a long way to helping and if she is smart, she will be a great asset for her adopted country. Evans loves to draw and her athleticism was highlighted by her gold State medals in track and field.

Even though Ocvirk has not featured so far on the road to the Final Round, the young forward looks like she now has the capacity to transfer her ever-evolving skills from youth teams to the senior set-up. She has caught the eye in a big way in recent years as the main go-to player for Slovenia in the paint and most recently has shown great maturity in her game with Celje. Her contributions last season saw her find superb consistency in her shooting, as well as continued hard work on the boards and it is only a matter of time before she is fully integrated into the senior team. Ocvirk was very talented at tennis but decided to follow in her mother's footsteps. Mom also played basketball.

ALMA POTOCNIK

Height: 1.73

Place of Birth: Kranj
Club Team 2016-17: Athlete Celje (Slovenia-SKL)
Career: Athlete Celje (Slovenia-SKL, 2012-17)

One of the most gifted players to have moved through the national youth ranks in recent years, Potocnik was a main architect of Slovenia's successful campaign at last summer's FIBA U20 Women's European Championship Division B. So much so, she was the second-leading scorer on the team and also the second on the assists chart which is evidence of just how she can create for others or take on the scoring load herself. She has been evolving at Athlete Celje under the watchful eye of Coach Grgic, but might struggle to snap up a bench place with the senior team, mainly because there is a queue behind with the likes of Baric and Oblak who can both take the playmaking spot. Still, many feel her time will inevitably come as she is a big talent in her own right.

BACK AFTER A DECADE AND READY TO MAKE A SPLASH

After a ten-year absence from the top table, Belgium are back dining with the elite and might just have the appetite to cause some surprises.

Their long-awaited return to the event will excite not only those living in the low country, but also many neutrals who for so many years have labelled Belgium as underachievers considering the talent they have.

It's no coincidence that their recent rise to prominence has collided with Emma Meesseman establishing herself as one of the best players not only in Europe, but also worldwide. The UMMC Ekaterinburg and Washington Mystics star will carry the largest chunk of her nation's hopes.

There will also be a unique and presumably one-time only opportunity to see the dream ticket of Meesseman playing at a major tournament for her country alongside the legendary Ann Wauters. The veteran's decision to end her sabbatical from the national team was also fundamental in Belgium emerging from the Qualifiers.

It will also offer a fitting finale at the international level for someone who is revered in the women's game, as she passes the torch on to the next generation.

Not that Belgium are only about their leading lights in the frontcourt, they touch down in Czech Republic as a very solid group of players, with competition fierce for places which is a bonus for head coach, Philip Mestdagh.

His daughter Kim has had another excellent year in the French League and EuroCup Women with Flammes Carolo Basket, and brings plenty of quality on the wings. Indeed, if she shoots the ball well, then Belgium's prospects will be seriously energized. Although, it is perhaps the only spot where depth is an issue.

However, in general, Belgium can harness a nice mix of youth and experience which permeates through the roster. Their backcourt benefits from the likes of the effervescent and entertaining Marjorie Carpreaux who played ten years ago and this edition might also see Julie Vanloo make an impact. It's just a blow that Belgium will be without the injured Hind Ben Abdelkader and WNBA draftee Julie Allemand.

Perhaps able to take inspiration from the likes of Sweden during FIBA EuroBasket Women 2013 and Montenegro in recent editions of the Final Round, they could be a real surprise package should things go well.

It is difficult to truly assess their potential at this level, but the Quarter-Finals are not out of the question if they hit the ground running. Most importantly, success is likely to come from their big-hitting duo in the paint avoiding injury and foul trouble, as well as the bench stepping up to the plate when needed.

For sure, Belgium's got game and they're now determined to prove it against the Continents' elite.

A highly-respected playcaller in his homeland and beyond, Mestdagh has delivered Belgium a return to the Final Round for the first time in a decade. His presence has encouraged the return of the legendary Ann Wauters which was key and reiterates the excellent job he has done in ensuring unity and harnessing the talent Belgium have always had into a winning formula. He has worked with many of the players from his time at Ieper and also coaching in EuroLeague Women and EuroCup Women with Castors Braine, who he departed during the middle of last season, while having previously been on board with the Lotto Young Cats project in EuroCup Women as well. When Belgium need points from the wings, it is normally Mestdagh who answers the call and delivers in a big way. She can occupy both the two or three spot on the floor and her offensive production is her main value, as well as her willingness to crash the glass. A major threat from three-point range, she can also create for her teammates and her displays at Flammes Carolo Basket in the French LFB over recent seasons have shown she can deliver at a high level. A graduate of Colorado State and having also played in Belgium and Spain, she has some nice experience to call upon and will be a key member of the starting five.

One of the biggest names in the women's game, Meesseman can become a legend of Belgian basketball if she continues her upward curve which has seen her crowned a EuroLeague Women champion at UMMC Ekaterinburg and find both popularity and respect Stateside in the WNBA. An intelligent player who has ice running through her veins on the floor, she is an excellent finisher both at the basket and can knock down jump shots too. She is a very active rebounder and is continually developing her moves in the paint. Having excelled at youth level and inspired Belgium to medals, she is now ready to lead the team at her first senior tournament. The other powerful aspect of Meesseman is that everyone she has worked with regularly go out of their way to stress just how likable and friendly she is as a person, emphasizing the all-round upsides of a player who could yet be destined for greatness.

Following in the footsteps of her older sister by attending Colorado State and playing in the NCAA, Mestdagh has also made a successful transition to the senior team. She offers a significant three-point threat and is likely to be a nice option coming off the bench in Czech Republic. Having briefly played in EuroLeague Women with Castors Braine, the swingman seems to have benefitted from playing in Germany last season with Eisvogel USC Freiburg where those extra minutes have helped to take her game forward. She is showing she can be a significant contributor and should not be labelled as only a shooter.

When Vanloo made people sit up and take notice at youth level for her country with a number of personal accolades and podium success, it looked like she would rocket to prominence. While it has taken a little longer than initially anticipated, she has been showing her full potential in Italy and in EuroCup Women with Ragusa. Playing in both France and Sweden has also given her a more hardened edge. Always moving to open spots when she is not handling the ball and penetrating, she can catch and shoot from midrange very nicely and is happy to pull the trigger. Defensively she has quick hands and regularly catches her opponents sleeping. She can also play as a combo and shuffle to the two spot.

Working with Coach Mestdagh at club level with Castors Braine, there is a strong trust between Delaere and the playcaller which has seen her play healthy minutes for the senior team in the last couple of years. She is a very good shooter who likes jump shots and can also slash to the basket effectively. She has worked hard to improve her upsides with some excellent play in 3x3 competitions as well, which has turned her into a better all-round player. Also incredibly active on defense, she is very much an essential wheel in the core rotation.

One of the true legends of the women's game in the modern era, Wauters is known around the globe after a career which has been laden with silverware and individual awards. While 36-years-old, she is still going strong and a real golden oldie who won a WNBA title last year with the L.A Sparks. But, it is in EuroLeague Women where she has made more impact than just about any other player in the competition's history. Having added to her stellar career by taking Belgium back to the Final Round, the elder stateswoman of the team will be the leader on and off the floor. Whether it is racking up rebounds, sinking buckets or matching up with opposing dangers, Wauters is the anchor in the paint for Belgium and a role model for many of her younger colleagues.

It would be something of a surprise if Adams makes it onto the final roster, but she landed herself a place in the last 15 for the tournament and that means the possibility of a dream debut. She has not previously been involved in any major way with the senior team since the curtain fell on her youth career three years ago. But, she offers great versatility as she can play multiple spots which is a real bonus. Likely to be a role player, she brings a reliable three-point threat and her work with Kangoeroes Basket Willebroek in past seasons has shown she is a safe pair of hands and will do what is required for the team. She also has previous EuroCup Women experience from the Belgian Federation-led Lotto Young Cats.

There is never a dull moment when Carpreaux is on the floor, as she is renowned as a highlights reel regular because of her eccentric style and willingness to put entertainment and enjoyment of the game before pragmatism. Yet her flamboyance and ability to get people out of their seats doesn't mean she is a maverick figure. She can still be practical when it matters most and that was reflected in her contributions during qualifying when she came up with more than six assists per game. With such silky ball-handling skills and creativity, she was a natural on the 3x3 scene and is the most highly ranked player from Belgium in the short version of the sport. The veteran playmaker is also one of only two survivors from the Final Round in 2007.

Having spent her entire career playing in the Belgian League, Raman is not particularly well-known outside of her homeland - although she did feature prominently with Lotto Young Cats in EuroCup Women. However, she could put herself more firmly on the radar by producing off the bench and showing the kind of scoring and rebounding prowess that has consistently seen her in the top ten for both categories domestically. A national team regular for several years, the forward has been a valued role player, able to run the floor and add a steady hand to most situations.

Possessing great speed and a quick dribble which can allow her to get onto the frontfoot and away from her defenders in 1-on-1 situations, Mayombo is also able to slice to the basket or spot-up and knock down jump shots. As well as her scoring capabilities, she is an adept passer and useful when the team wants to press defensively. The last few years have seen Mayombo take a step up in her career as she has put in three good seasons in the highly-rated Russian Premier League and most recently the KBSL in Turkey. Playing against that level of opponent each week means she is better equipped than ever at the international level.

A highly-rated frontcourt player who is still only 20-years-old and with very good potential, Linskens is known for her nice shooting touch and impressive range for a center. While not as athletic as some of her peers, her ability to knock down shots and take her defenders away from the block can create useful spaces for her teammates to exploit. She shone at youth level and signed off last summer with a superb tournament double-double at the FIBA U20 Women's European Championship. It remains to be seen if she can translate that level of productivity into the senior side, but she is set to be a central part of the team for the next decade at least.

There are few players around who have the great length and wingspan of Geldolf and that helped her land a place in the NCAA at University of Miami where she has just completed her freshman season. Attracted to the attributes she has also shown at youth level, the center has good shot-blocking ability, as well as a strong presence on the glass. It may be that FIBA EuroBasket Women 2017 comes a little too early, but she will be in the mix and certainly an even stronger candidate for inclusion with each passing year. Geldolf has also stated her desire to become a forensic scientist with the Police when she finishes her career.

The role played by Hendrickx during Belgium's return to the Final Round could prove priceless as she will be expected to use her experience to ensure the team doesn't take a dip in effectiveness or intensity when the big-hitters in the paint are resting on the bench. A valued member of the side for many years, the forward will try to use her size on defense and ability to put points on the board to good use. She has lots of experience from recent seasons in EuroCup Women and could exploit any opponents who underestimate her ability to be an influential figure.

HELEEN NAUWELAERS

Height: 1.80
Position: Small Forward/Power Forward
Date of Birth: 14/03/96

Having featured briefly during the Qualifiers, the forward will be hoping she can force her way back into the shake-up after another eye-catching season at Sint Katelijne Waver where she has spent her entire career. However, she has broadened her horizons as part of the Lotto Young Cats side who featured in EuroCup Women across multiple seasons, while also impressing at a number of youth tournaments in national team colors. Something of a 'tweener' between the wing and the paint, Nauwelaers can shoot the three consistently and is equally happy mixing it up inside if necessary. She is also a very nice passer of the ball for her position which is an added bonus.

If Maes does make it onto the 12-name roster for the Final Round, it will represent a remarkable feat, since she has not previously been given any real minutes with the senior team and has not played for any of the leading Belgian clubs, albeit for a handful of games for the federation's EuroCup Women project, the Lotto Young Cats. Yet despite this, she has worked her way into contention with several ever-improving campaigns for DBC Houthalen in the last four seasons. There is little doubt that 2016-17 was the best of her career and she came close to posting a double-double season in the Belgian League and this has made people sit up and take notice. Especially proficient on the offensive glass, she could potentially find herself backing up leading twin towers Emma Meesseman and Ann Wauters.

LATVIA

YOUNG GUNS IN TO REPLACE A LEGEND

If there's one 'X-Factor' team at this edition of the Final Round, then maybe it is Latvia who are out to answer a lot of questions after their roller-coaster campaign in the Qualifiers and the departure of a major legend.

With Anete Jekabsons having seemingly played her last game in a national team vest, she leaves a void that will not only be impossible to fill at this Final Round, but likely for another generation. The departure of the legendary shooting guard from the big stage will hurt massively. Latvia lose their long-time leader and a heavyweight of the women's game globally, who led them in scoring and assists during the Qualifiers.

With their leading rebounder Zane Tamane also missing, it means that Latvia are going to have to rely on another legend in Gunta Basko-Melnbarde to lead them on and off the floor as she posts what is an inevitable swansong.

Alongside the skilled and vastly experienced swingman, Latvia will have combo guard Elina Babkina who has plenty of Final Round court time and productive contributions to her name. Shooter Ieva Krastina can also make some noise from long-range and in this respect, the backcourt provides a solid enough foundation.

With Kristine Vitola having played well in the Turkish League and in EuroCup Women with Galatasaray and Anete Steinberga with two recent EuroLeague Women Final Four appearances behind her at ZVVZ USK Prague, they have options in the paint too.

Aija Putnina will also extend the frontcourt rotation even further – although there is a question as to whether any of them are the kind of impact or exciting difference-makers Latvia are looking for.

It may be the case that what looked to be Latvia's medium to long-term options are now fast-tracked to the Final Round, with Paula Strautmane impressing in the NCAA and her younger sister Digna Strautmane widely heralded as one of the best young players in European youth circles. Meanwhile, Kitija Laksa is an exciting wing player who made her debut two years ago at the last edition of the Final Round and will be hoping to step up her contributions this time.

What is an absolute certainty is that Latvia find themselves drawn in the most difficult of groups, one which, on paper at least, is arguably the most intense. It means everyone must deliver in a big way if they want to avoid a repeat of 2015 when they fell at the first hurdle and went home early.

Head coach Martins Zibarts will be acutely aware that his side are about to come up against three seriously powerful, physical and experienced opposing frontcourts in Montenegro, Belgium and Russia, so defending solidly in the paint will be fundamental to their prospects.

Whether they can then find the scoring from the backcourt and wings to take a step forward is the biggest mystery at this stage and you feel it could go either way for the Baltic nation.

There is no doubt that Coach Zibarts knows the roster inside-out, having coached most of the players during their youth careers and attained some success. It's a useful insight, not only for this edition of the Final Round, but also for the entirety of this Olympic cycle as Latvia are waving goodbye to some of their great veteran players and look to a new generation to start doing the business at senior level. He has been one of the rising stars for some time in Latvian coaching circles, spending much of his time as an assistant, including time with Dynamo Kursk because of his scouting and analytical skills which once had him labelled as 'The Professor', a nickname also suitable as he spent so much of his early career coaching at Latvijas Universitate. While the Qualifiers had some ups and downs, Zibarts got it done in the end and will have taken valuable lessons forward into his first major tournament at the helm.

Ever since she made her major tournament debut at the Beijing Olympics back in 2008 while still a teenager and the youngest player on the roster, Babkina has been one of the most prominent Latvian players around. Only her career has not always hit the heights of that early promise – or at least with the national team. She starred at the Final Round in 2011 and again in 2013, but missed the 2009 and 2015 editions, meaning that still only aged 28-years-old, she could have been preparing to play in her fifth edition. What is in little doubt is that her combo capabilities are hugely useful for Coach Zibarts. She can pull the strings if required or look to slide over to the two spot and make shots. For the lover of all things pink, her effectiveness is likely to be measured in terms of her application in the areas of focus and consistency, because the talent remains unquestionable.

It's been a special last 12 months for the veteran swingman after she came back home to play in Latvia with TTT Riga and won the domestic title. She may be 37-years-old, but there is no keeping this legend of the Latvian game down. None of the high-octane style or classy touches have been diluted and some say she has just continued to get better with age. Possessing a sky-high basketball IQ, nice versatility, the ability to lead, score and set the tone defensively, Basko-Melnbarde is the entire package. One of the most famous Latvian exports, this will be a sensational sixth Final Round, having first played for the senior team in 1996, making this her third decade in the team. She was the first-ever EuroLeague Women champion from Latvia and speaks five different languages.

After a superb youth career with the Latvian national teams, Kreslina was already ready to go at Fordham University in the NCAA, but sustained an ACL injury which caused her to push the pause button. But, she has had plenty of people off their seats with her shooting ability, since making a recovery and now she is back on track after being named a member of the Atlantic-10 Conference rookie team. It remains to be seen if she will be rewarded with a first-ever slot for the Final Round, but she has done plenty to impress during her delayed freshman year. If Latvia are looking to the future, she may well secure a place at the end of the bench. She was also the youngest Latvian national team player to score 13 points, in her third official game when she completed the feat against Italy in 2014. Kreslina also loves arts and crafts.

After being overlooked for the 2011 and 2013 editions, Vitola finally received the green light in 2015 and had mixed success. She smashed it on the boards and emerged as the leading rebounder for her team, but didn't shoot as well as she usually does. Since competing in Hungary, the center has moved up a gear in club basketball with a EuroLeague Women debut in a Perfumerias Avenida vest where she won a Spanish title, before spending last season playing in the seriously good Turkish League and EuroCup Women with Galatasaray. She has been showing that she can excel under the basket at a high level and she shot the ball well, while also showing the defensive side of her game and quick hands. Vitola turned down a modelling career to pursue basketball and is known as an avid reader and nature lover.

A smooth shooter who can kill you from the outside or by also stepping inside the three-point line to burn you with open jump-shots, Krastina is a consistent scoring option for Latvia. She also brings court smarts and played a prominent role in the Qualifiers. Previously featuring at FIBA EuroBasket Women 2013, the keen skier lit it up on the road to France, but she was well-scouted and shut down when the Final Round got underway. Since then, Krastina has played three seasons with TTT Riga where she is captain. In addition to her cool head in tight situations, she can also be a menace defensively as she is quick and reads the game very well. Krastina has been the face and ambassador of the National Breast Health Awareness campaign since 2014.

A role player at TTT Riga, Priede is looking to squeeze herself a place on the national team roster to fulfil the same role, having not featured at the past two editions of the Final Round. She made the roster back in Poland in 2011, and after getting some minutes in the Qualifiers for this event, is hoping she can make a return. Offering a little bit of everything when she comes off the bench, she has nice handles and is a safe bet with the ball in her hands. She likes to create her own shot and will always be hustling down rebounding opportunities coming in off the wing. The last two years with TTT have seen her with a more structured role and that has suited her playing style and may be transferred to national team duties. Very much the funniest person in the locker room, the Missouri alumni is a good impersonator and guaranteed to make her colleagues laugh.

There is a real buzz about the seemingly limitless potential of Strautmane to become a future senior team star after some epic performances in the last few years at youth level. She also posted her first double-double in the Latvia-Estonia league at the age of 14. The forward has been dominant in several youth tournaments, showing her impressive strength and mental toughness by also excelling when squaring up against older players. Her exploits have even caught the eye Stateside and she is committed to play for Syracuse in the NCAA later this year. For now though, she is hoping that she will get handed a first-ever EuroBasket Women Final Round slot. She was in the mix for the Qualifiers but didn't get handed any minutes. However, her high level of technical skill and undoubted level of talent mean that despite the fact she is only 18-years-old, she may still prove an irresistible choice when it comes to picking the final roster. Strautmane is also recognized not only for her skills but also her kind and caring nature off the court.

Handed a major tournament debut two years ago, Rozenberga was utilized again during the Qualifiers and was an ever-present figure coming off the bench. Since then she has taken her skills to Belgium where she has been stepping out with Namur – including a first foray into EuroCup Women. While the forward has not necessarily lived up to the hype which followed her around during a very productive youth career, she has the energy and dedication to make an impact. She will be aggressive at every opportunity if she is able to pull a post-move or roll to the hoop, with her minutes also dependent upon how she performs defensively against some high-class opponents. Growing up in the hometown of the former Latvia national team coach (both men and women) Armands Kraulins, she fulfilled her dream to play together with the legendary Anete Jekabsone-Zogota.

Laksa only celebrated her 21st birthday last month but is about to step out at a third FIBA EuroBasket Women Final Round. Barely 17-years-old at the 2013 edition as one of the top two youngest active players at the event, she has continued to impress with TTT Riga and for the youth teams prior to playing College basketball at South Florida. A nice shooter from most spots on the floor, Laksa is also capable of creating and scoring off the dribble, ingredients which make her tough to shackle defensively. While she had no involvement in the Qualifiers because of her NCAA commitments, she showed her value as a unanimous American Athletic Conference first team selection. She has learned from older brother Martins, who helped Valmiera/Ordo win their first ever Latvian championship in 2016. Laksa also originally represented Kolibri basketball school, whose anthem is a Latvian song Bimini. She once won the Junkanoo Jam tournament MVP award, averaging 34 points per game, in a Bimini island tournament that was relocated from the Bahamas to Bimini after Hurricane Matthew.

The last three club seasons for Steinberga have been huge in terms of both raising her profile and enhancing her skills and experience which could be about to benefit Latvia at her third Final Round outing. After riding her way to a historic EuroCup Women Final appearance with Castors Braine, she then registered a fantastic season in the top quality Russian League with Chevakata. Then, she made a mid-season move to ZVVZ USK Prague and found herself playing at the EuroLeague Women Final Four in Istanbul. That, and another EuroLeague Women season, seems to have given her additional confidence and built her mental resilience, which, with her array of post skills and athleticism, have her penciled in to be the main star in the frontcourt. She played more minutes than anyone else during the Qualifiers which shows just what a very important player she is. Interestingly she came late to the game, only starting to play at the age of 14.

Eight years after representing Latvia at a major tournament at youth level, the time looks to have come for Eglite to finally play in a major competition for the senior side. She participated in the Qualifiers for the Final Round in 2015, but missed the cut and now she is out to make amends. Latvia are having to really dig deep in the backcourt and need some new players to emerge and show they can deliver on the international stage. The guard has experience in EuroCup Women on her resume and is both a good shooter and creator off the dribble, so could be a very interesting alternative. Eglite organized the FIBA 3x3 Latvian Championship in 2014, 2015 and 2016. She was a USA Conference champion during her NCAA career and is one of Latvia's three UTEP alumni, along with Anete Steinberga and Kristine Vitola.

By her own high standards, Putnina was not at her best during the last edition of the Final Round and will be keen to get back on track on the international tournament stage, having also missed the 2013 edition with an injury. She normally occupies the four spot and brings clinical finishing, as well as a nice shooting range which keeps her defenders honest and not willing to cheat when she steps to the outside. She is happy to operate at the high or low post and offers lots of upsides – including plenty of experience from the best leagues in Europe, such as France, Turkey, Italy and Spain. Watch out for her exploiting the pick and roll, or for her nice footwork on the block and around the basket. She will also clean up on the glass and in summary, prove quite a handful for her opponents. Made a move across the Atlantic Ocean to make the 2008 Olympic team at the age of 20. She is known as a real world traveler and explorer and her father Ugis is known as the Wikipedia of women's basketball.

As Latvia look to turn a new page, there may be a spot on the roster for Strautmene who has been impressing in her Sophomore year at Quinnipiac University in the NCAA. She helped them reach the 'Sweet Sixteen' for the first time in school history, as the second Latvian player to do so. They were also only the fourth-ever number 12 seed to make it that far. She has been rolling with some good numbers and in between her first two years on the other side of the Atlantic, she posted a terrific FIBA U20 Women's European Championship where she only just fell short of a fine tournament double-double. Leading her nation on the glass and combining with her younger sister Digna, it is a combination that may be seen at senior level - if not this time around then at some point in the close future.

Even if she was not named in the initial squad and had to wait for an injury to open the door of opportunity, that does not mean Brumermane will not earn her place on the bench. Latvia have chosen an experienced replacement who has already featured at an Olympic Games, while this could be an eye-catching fifth Final Round appearance - her first coming some 12 years ago. Now a veteran, her defensive know-how could be particularly appealing with Latvia facing some seriously talented and dangerous opposing frontcourts right from the tournament tip-off. The center has been playing in the second tier of French basketball in the past year, but that won't be a concern and she might just get the thumbs-up from Coach Zibarts having played in an impressive 92 games for her country.

Jakobsone has never had the chance to show what she can do at senior level and yet she is now widely recognized as one of the most improved players in Latvian basketball. That has collided with a move to Vega 1/Liepaja in the past couple of years where she has revealed in taking on more leadership responsibility in the backcourt, exemplified by her making the most assists in the Latvia-Estonia League Regular Season. The wind might just be blowing in her favor for a surprise call up, since she arrived in preparation camp off the back of the best season of her career when she averaged a double-figure scoring return and almost five assists per game. Perhaps only her diminutive size in terms of defense might be an issue at the top level, but she has the heart and tenacity to convince Coach Zibarts she is worthy of a spot on the end of the bench. She won the silver medal in the Latvian Championship playing together with her nine-year older sister Zane who played at FIBA EuroBasket Women 2013.

MONTENEGRO

With a highly-rated and top drawer coach newly installed to call the shots, Montenegro have a chance to continue their fairytale run at the Final Round – even if playing a beautiful game is firmly out of the question.

When expert EuroLeague Women navigator Roberto Iniguez was announced as the new head coach of Montenegro earlier this year, it was an appointment that came way out of leftfield and took many people by surprise.

Perhaps with their ageing generation and not too many exciting young players emerging, the Montenegrin Federation were acutely aware that they needed someone who can squeeze every last drop out of an over-performing group of players who have taken the Final Round by storm since they debuted in 2011.

Their first foray into the tournament in Poland was memorable as they posted a mesmerizing winning start and even if the relative minnows were dismissed as one-timers and a so-called 'flash in the pan', they proved the doubters wrong by coming back for the 2013 and 2015 editions.

Now it is a fourth appearance in a row and they will be aware this could be their toughest test yet. Few teams will have quite as much experience when it comes to playing together and the core of the team remains unchanged.

Led by the masterful Jelena Skerovic who directs the traffic from the backcourt and will be the most important cog in this summer's wheel, coach Iniguez will surely want to employ a defensive-orientated and controlled style.

Don't go expecting any 'run-and-gun' from a team that is not about athleticism and transition, but more about solid organization, defensive principles and passion. If it sounds like Montenegro are a team to skip watching – think again.

Iniguez has no choice but to show the kind of hard-nosed pragmatism required to get them out of their initial group, especially after being rocked by an injury to WNBA champion Jelena Dujic very late in preparation. Now, quality and a supercharged approach on the court is likely to be missed.

The frontcourt will have to rely on the towering center Iva Perovanovic and the perennially underrated Milica Jovanovic. With the naturalized Angelica Robinson adding top-level rebounding skills and post-play, as well as an affinity with Iniguez from her time with him at Nadezhda, where they made the EuroLeague Women Final, there is much to be positive about.

A lot is going to hinge on whether Snezana Aleksic can step up in the shooting guard position – or someone else can become a valuable 'X-Factor' off the bench. Yes, Montenegro will be a seriously tough nut to crack and will be happy to bump the ball down to their superior frontcourt, but there will be a need for some zone-busters to get on the front-foot and give their nation an added dimension.

Even with their new playcaller in the hot-seat and a range of very good players, it looks like a daunting task for Montenegro – but we have said that at the past three editions and they always come back and shove such words down our collective throats.

After all, this is the team that only just missed out on a Semi-Finals place in Budapest two years ago, when they came within a whisker of upsetting Spain and reaching the last four for the first time in their history.

COACH

ROBERTO INIGUEZ

Nationality: Spanish
Date of Birth: 05/09/67
Place of Birth: Vitoria-Gasteiz
Club Team 2016-17: Nadezhda Orenburg (Russia-Premier League)
Club Career: Valencia Basket (Spain-EBA, 2006-11); Ros Casares (Spain-LF, 2011-12); Fenerbahce (Turkey-KBSL, 2012-14); Nadezhda Orenburg (Russia-Premier League, 2015-17)
International Career: Montenegro Women (Head Coach, 2017-)
Twitter: @robertoih5

One of the most respected playcallers in the game, Iniguez has proven himself as an expert navigator at the elite level via his eye-popping track record in EuroLeague Women. He famously won a first title for Ros Casares in his first season at the first-ever Final Eight back in 2012 and has enjoyed a love affair with the competition ever since, reaching a number of Finals with Fenerbahce and a 2016 fairytale ride to the title game with Nadezhda. His appointment may have come out of leftfield to many, but they will certainly benefit from his experience of working at a high level and he will not be fazed by a lack of experience in international basketball. He is a meticulous planner, will get his team well organized at the defensive end and show them the path to grinding out results at a tempo that suits them. A former player for more than a decade in the ACB, his son Pablo is a professional soccer player in Spain, spending the last season at Rayo Vallecano.

Having assumed the naturalized slot for FIBA EuroBasket Women 2015, Robinson will bring her strength and power back to the table. She will relish working under Roberto Iniguez who she knows well from Nadezhda, where the pair helped propel the Russian side to a staggering run all the way to the EuroLeague Women Final in 2016. Since then, the center has moved her talent to Turkey and shone brightly with Yakin Dogu Universitesi. The top scorer for her adopted country two years ago, she is a phenomenal rebounder and huge presence defensively. Most importantly, in addition to her obvious class on the court, she made a successful transition in terms of winning over the locker room instantly with her attitude, work ethic and personality. This winning recipe means her presence will help Montenegro continue to be competitive against anyone placed in front of them. She will also have huge confidence after being part of the Yakin Dogu side that won a glorious and historic treble via the Turkish Cup, Turkish Championship and EuroCup Women title. Robinson and her twin brother are the youngest of six siblings. Angelica majored in Child and Family Development.

Crowned a WNBA champion at Los Angeles Sparks last summer, Dubljevic is now one of her country's most famous sporting exports, and will be hoping she can win her race against time to be on the court, after picking up an injury just over a week out from the tournament beginning. Despite some doubts about her durability within an intense tournament format because of previous back spasms which have ruled her out, she remains the magic key for Montenegro as they look to cause more upsets at a fourth consecutive edition. The forward is so important because in addition to her ability to lead the side in the scoring stakes, she also brings some serious attitude, with her feisty and combative approach helping to get everybody up for the battle. Setting the tone at each end of the floor, if Dubljevic is up for it and brings her fine balance of aggression and skill, then she will continue to be the driving force. Off the court, the forward is experienced in making mistakes in buying proper fuel for her car. While in the USA on the road between Los Angeles and Las Vegas, she took wrong fuel and was stuck on the road for five hours.

At tall and elegant player who runs the floor well and also has nice handles for her height, Milosev is hoping that she can impress Coach Iniguez enough to make the final cut and squeeze into the 12. She certainly offers some flexibility as she can fill into the shooting guard position when needed and is particularly mobile and active off the ball. Willing to post-up or hit the outside shot, she looks to be in a good place after impressing in the second tier of German basketball last season. Although she has limited international experience with only a handful of appearances to date, she can't be ruled out as a useful option coming off the bench. In her free time, Milosev enjoys creating tattoos and painting, sometimes she is a model too.

One of the great European playmakers of the modern era, the 36-year-old continues to pull the strings for her country to great effect and her ability to successfully dictate the tempo could yet prove the single most important dynamic of Montenegro's campaign. She will dig deep and use all of her close to two decades of experience to be on the floor as much as possible and pace herself through each encounter. Any doubts that being in the twilight of her career means shifting down a gear were firmly dispelled when she averaged a magnificent seven assists per game during the Qualifiers. She also led in steals too and that sharp mind will be priceless. Skerovic will be the number one port of call for coach Iniguez who will be picking her brains and trusting his playmaker to be his first Lieutenant. This will be her fifth Final Round appearance as she also played 12 years ago in a Serbia and Montenegro vest. If Skerovic hadn't become a basketball player, she would have been an astrologist or an archaeologist.

There is a desire in Montenegro for a long-term solution to the sizeable void that will soon be left by the retirement of the legendary Jelena Skerovic. While she has a long way to go and is still very raw, there is hope that the ball handling skills of the 2001-born guard might see her take up the playmaking reins with the senior team. It is a stretch to imagine her being thrust into the action on Czech soil, yet she wouldn't be fazed as she played against opponents five years older than her last summer at the FIBA U20 Women's European Championship Division B. She is one of the top prospects in her homeland and someone to keep tabs on for future tournaments as it seems a case of when and not if she makes a breakthrough into the senior side.

Hopes are high that after being given an opportunity during the FIBA EuroBasket Women 2017 Qualifiers, Pejovic can now prove herself in the international arena and be one of the players to pick up the baton when some of the frontcourt veterans call time on their careers. She has been a consistent performer in the Montenegrin Superleague with powerhouse Buducnost and has the foundation to now push on and learn from those quality players around her in the national team setup. She has the height and size to compete and cause problems, and offensively she is efficient enough to take most of the chances that come her way. While there are players in front of her on the roster, she might just be able to grab a spot at the end of the bench. Away from basketball, Pejovic also got married recently.

What Aleksic lacks in height, she more than makes up for with a big heart on the court and now lots of experience too, as she prepares for her fourth Final Round appearance. Whenever Montenegro are looking for some production from beyond the three-point line, the guard often steps up to the plate and a couple of big games during the Qualifiers were evidence of how she remains a core player still to be reckoned with. Aleksic might have also picked up a few useful Spanish phrases to help build a good relationship with Coach Iniguez, since she spent last season playing in Liga Femenina at Mann Filter Zaragoza. Meanwhile, she showed at the previous edition of the Final Round that she can also thread passes to her teammates - an often overlooked aspect of her game. Aleksic shouldn't be messed with despite her diminutive physical frame, since she practiced karate and has a black belt.

While she may not be the headline-maker and is regularly overshadowed by some of her frontcourt peers, nobody in the forward spots received more minutes per game at the previous Final Round. That speaks volumes for the degree of trust and consistency that consecutive playcallers have had in Jovanovic. A hard-running forward who is very quick and direct to snap up scoring opportunities that might bypass others, her fast thinking and efficient outlook has attracted the attention of many big name teams. With the bonus of a nice shooting range which completes a lovely inside-outside game, her level of quality is right up there with everybody else on the roster and she will be influential yet again. The brother and sister of Jovanovic are both basketball referees and she has a wish to play in a game where they would both be officiating.

After suffering the agony of being omitted from the final roster for the first three appearances by her country at the Final Round, could it be fourth time lucky for Matovic? Now aged 29-years-old and after waiting patiently for more than a decade, you could forgive her for thinking it might never happen. Yet she was given hope by former head coach Momir Milatovic who used her, albeit sparingly, during the Qualifiers. Her versatility and ability to play multiple positions could be the reason why she finally gets the nod for a belated debut, while she also has a strong track record of contributing in every category of the game with Buducnost. Matovic enjoys eating enormously, even though you would never guess from her physical appearance.

Having been handed her senior tournament debut at the 2015 Final Round, Rakovic will be hoping she can retain her place after only featuring sporadically during the Qualifiers. Some very impressive youth performances had many people tipping her to make a serious splash at senior level and while that has not quite happened yet, she is working hard to hit back. That has involved taking her game to Spain and after moving out of her comfort zone, this new horizon has seen her get back on the radar. While the queue remains frustratingly long when it comes to nailing down a place in the forward spots, she has given glimpses of what she can offer in terms of her nice shot selection which has regularly contributed to a very efficient shooting percentage throughout her career. The sister of Rakovic is also a basketball player and they previously played together in the national team.

This could prove to be a breakout tournament for the playmaker because she could finally get the chance to truly take hold of the torch from the long-serving Jelena Skerovic in what has been a pupil and master relationship. It was noticeable during the Qualifiers where she played lots of minutes and while she doesn't have as much experience, she has taken a big step up since debuting at the previous edition of the Final Round. Taking her skills to the highly-respected Hungarian and Russian Leagues, playing against better quality opponents every week has prepared her better than ever to pick up the playmaking reins for her country when needed. She is also a guard who can score as well as create, so this gives Montenegro some comfort if their number one playmaker is hit by injury or foul trouble. Vucetic has placed a bet with a friend that Montenegro will be playing at the Tokyo Olympics in 2020.

Offering a dynamic and all-action style that injects energy into any situation, Pasic is turning heads with a standout season in Romania where she is demonstrating she has plenty of offensive tools in her armoury. Although she has previously put up some nice cameos and debuted at the Final Round in Hungary and Romania, perhaps this could be the time for the swingman to shine with some new-found confidence and momentum behind her. While she likes to hit the mid-range jumper, she can also exploit the pick-and-roll when she finds herself in possession and her ability to put the ball on the floor makes her a versatile player who could grow in influence at this edition of the Final Round. Pasic also enjoys making slam dunks with tennis balls.

The ultimate role player for her country, Popovic is often the go-to 'big' when the starting players require a rest in games and she has proven in short bursts that she can do the job in the international arena. She may be rugged in her style, but a willingness to stand toe-to-toe with opponents who have bigger reputations and knock them out of their stride makes her aggressive attitude a real positive. Another veteran performer, she has seen and done it all before, so whether it is harvesting some rebounds, snapping up some smart put-back chances or creating openings off the ball, she will be ready to go in what could be a deserved swansong.

The 21-year-old is a particularly exciting talent who will take opponents off the dribble with either hand and that explosiveness can get people out of their seats. Because she can create her own shot as well as slicing to the bucket, she can be tricky to guard and is a leading performer in her homeland. While she may need to prove herself in a different European League in the future, her three successive summers of double-figure scores at youth tournaments for her country underline why she is rated so highly and was given the thumbs up in all six Qualifiers. That means she now looks a sure-bet to make a Final Round debut and might make a few watch-lists of people who are looking out for rising stars. And, even if she is still relatively early in her career, she eventually wants to become a coach.

The towering veteran has been an absolute anchor in the paint ever since her team's sensational Final Round debut in 2011 when Perovanovic was the standout player until she was carried off the court in tears with a serious injury. Since recovering, she has continued to be a dominant figure and played in top leagues such as Russia and Turkey. With good mobility and footwork for her size, deceptive quickness and the ability to take over on the glass, she continues to offer an array of positives. Perhaps the most important factor will be that she can matchup defensively with imposing opponents and her vast experience is also a major bonus. Perovanovic is getting married in September and her future husband is a former basketball player.

RUSSIA

FORMER GIANTS ON THE BRINK OF SOMETHING SPECIAL

The last Olympic cycle was an unprecedented disaster for this great women's basketball nation and now they look well-equipped to restore their reputation as one of the game's most powerful nations.

The rot started at FIBA EuroBasket Women 2013 in France when, they not only endured the embarrassment of an unthinkable Round 1 exit, they did so as the defending champions, having stood proudly clutching gold medals in Lodz two years earlier.

It was a remarkable and rapid fall from grace, with extra punishment coming in the form of a first absence from the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup in 2014.

While hopes were raised of a potential Olympic place when they hit the floor in Hungary and Romania two years ago, they failed to restore themselves to the global stage after being edged out of Rio contention in agonizing fashion by Turkey.

After yet another inquest, but at least buoyed by the remarkable and breathtaking tournament debut of a 16-year-old phenomenon in Maria Vadeeva, it was her former head coach at Sparta&K M.R. Vidnoje, Alexander Vasin, who was tasked with continuing the rebuilding program.

It was a smart move, with coach Vasin having worked alongside more or less all the hugely talented youngsters knocking on the senior team door and that was borne out, through an unbeaten run in the Qualifiers.

Vasin backed the younger players, with significant court-time given to Vadeeva, along with the likes of Raisa Musina, Kseniia Levchenko and Daria Kolosovskaia.

Yet, outside of Vadeeva continuing her evolution, it has been the mainstays of the team that have got Russia back to the Final Round and in a position to launch a serious assault on the podium for the first time in three editions – as well as trying to once again clutch a precious ticket to the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup 2018.

At the heart of this process is the ever-reliable and respected Evgeniia Beliakova – a champion on both sides of the pond with UMMC Ekaterinburg and Los Angeles Sparks. While known primarily for her three-point shooting, her defensive capabilities and all-round experience are priceless.

The same can be said for naturalized combo-guard, Epiphany Prince who should be on board again, along with FIBA EuroBasket Women 2011 MVP, Elena Kirillova (nee Danilochkina).

Last time Russia only just fell short, but with young guns Vadeeva, Musina and Levchenko all EuroLeague Women players now and with a full set of Qualifiers behind them, it feels like Russia are deeper and therefore better armed to spark a genuine renaissance.

After being a dominant power for so much of FIBA EuroBasket Women history, it feels almost unthinkable to even consider a third edition without them on the podium and that is a very genuine outcome. Although, on the other hand, they do have the tools to pack a serious punch if they play well and a top-five spot remains the required target.

COACH

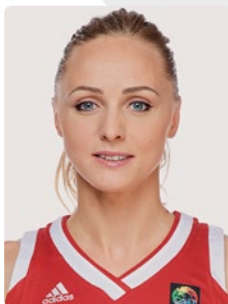

ALEXANDER VASIN

Nationality: Russian
Date of Birth: 03/04/63
Place of Birth: Moscow
Team 2016-17: Sparta&K M.R.Vidnoje (Russia-Premier League)
Club Career: Dynamo Moscow (Russia-Premier League, 2006-08); Sparta&K M.R.Vidnoje (Russia-Premier League, 2013-17)
International Career: Russia Women (Head Coach, 2015-)

Seen as the perfect fit for the transition of a wealth of rising stars into the senior ranks as Russia look to build the foundations for their return as a giant of the women's game in coming years, Vasin has won rave reviews for his delivery so far. He guided his side through to a flawless six wins in the Qualifiers by relying largely on youth, helped by the fact he knows and trusts so many of his players having worked with them at club level with Sparta&K M.R. Vidnoje. While some have doubted his ability to lead and be tough enough to lead Russia to medals, there is a strong weight of opinion that tactically and technically, Vasin hits a sky-high score in these categories. So far at least, he is looking like the right man to lead Russia back on the road to glory again.

The fairytale continues for Beglova, who had never played for a top club or even in a European competition until just three years ago when she made the switch to Nadezhda. Since then, she has confirmed her newfound status as a highly-respected and established EuroLeague Women guard with Final Four experience, while simultaneously cementing herself as a member of Russia's core rotation - despite only making her Final Round debut in 2015. Her importance can be emphasized by the fact she played 23 minutes per game across all six Qualifiers and while she is never likely to erupt for a game-winning points tally, her protection of the ball as a playmaker is exemplary and she is defensively sound. Both are elements that mean she is likely to have even more of an input at this edition of the Final Round. Beglova is also well-known for her charity work in Orenburg where she has played in recent seasons.

The inspirational leader of this young team and seen as a long-serving veteran player even though she starts the tournament at only 30-years-old, Beliakova is one of the best shooters in the global game. From behind the three-point line she can be a real assassin and cut you stone dead if you give her any space to operate. But she is also hugely flexible and will cover multiple positions other than her main shooting guard spot if the team needs it. She is the heart and soul of Russia right now and defensively, she is hugely important because she lays down the standards which everyone else must follow. She is a reigning WNBA Champion after grabbing the coveted Championship ring at Los Angeles Sparks, while the guard has also lifted EuroLeague Women silverware at UMMC Ekaterinburg. A top-level operator, she is likely to be the reason Russia excel if they post a good tournament. Like a lot of St. Petersburg natives, she's big fan of museums and intellectual TV shows.

Identified at a young age as not only an all-action player with a lengthy and impressive skill-set, it is the hard-nosed leadership qualities of Kolosovskaia that sets her apart and has many tipping her to become a future senior captain. There is a long way to go until that happens and she first needs to get the thumbs up from Coach Vasin for a major tournament debut. Nobody knows her better than the playcaller who is with her at Sparta&K M.R. Vidnoje and has been central to her development. Much will depend on whether she can get her perimeter game to click, because when she does, all of the ingredients come together - as has been seen at youth level when she was outstanding and most memorably the FIBA U18 Women's European Championship MVP.

There are many who would rightly argue that - along with Serbia winning their maiden FIBA EuroBasket Women title - the story of Final Round two years ago was the scintillating and spectacular emergence of the 16-year-old phenomenon. Vadeeva made the world sit up and take notice with some extraordinary displays under the basket as she transferred seamlessly from her eye-bulging numbers at youth level into the senior set-up. Even those who said too much was put on her shoulders could not overlook the fact she was the most efficient player on the roster. She lit up the highlights reel with a number of gorgeous 'And-1' plays, showcasing her footwork, finishing at the basket, fearsome shot-blocking and a now trademark steely stare at anybody who was getting in her way. Since then she has made a money-spinning move to Dynamo Kursk and won EuroLeague Women silverware in her impressive first season. She remains on course to be Russia's number one star for the next decade and beyond. Vadeeva has also made a bet with her brother that she will buy him a car if she can't dunk before she turns 19.

The forward has had a truly fascinating national team career, with her only two major tournament appearances both very successful and coming within just over 10 months of each other. Vidmer posted a very nice debut in 2010 at the FIBA Basketball Women's World Cup, prior to being crowned a FIBA EuroBasket Women 2011 champion. That was her last big event in a Russia vest, but now she looks on course for a tournament return after working hard to get herself back in the mix and scoring almost 10 points per game in the Qualifiers. She played for Russia in 3x3 which helped her fall in love with the game again. A solid contributor in EuroLeague Women with Dynamo Kursk, for whom she helped seal a historic maiden title, and a former EuroCup Women winner with Dynamo Moscow, she knows what it takes to be productive and successful at this level. She will be very important defensively.

A fine shot-blocker and very efficient around the basket, Vieru now also brings lots of experience with more than 120 games in EuroLeague Women to her name after playing for most of the top Russian clubs. She is also a title winner in the competition and her time at UMMC has seen her raise her game to command the minutes she craves. While she can get into foul trouble at times, she is beginning to play with more awareness and is becoming a fully rounded player at this level which is a big positive for Russia. With Olympic and FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup minutes also on her resume, this will be her third-straight Final Round appearance.

It has been a tough gig to represent her adopted nation and after the team failed to punch a ticket for the Rio Olympics, the spotlight inevitably fell on the naturalized Prince. Especially since she was also part of the team that was spectacularly dumped out at the first hurdle in 2013 when Russia were reigning champions. Yet the numbers, commitment and performances, particularly two years ago, showed that the combo guard had done everything possible on the floor. She used all of her WNBA and EuroLeague Women quality to pull the strings and make some big shots, playing more minutes than any other player. If she opts to play again, she will be hugely influential and she has shown at Dynamo Kursk just what a top-notch performer she can be as she was many people's alternative MVP in the EuroLeague Women Final when Kursk won their first title a few months ago. She has also really made Kursk her home after buying property in the city.

A combination of injuries and personal issues have curtailed the international career of the shooting ace whose talent has never been in question - as the likes of George Dikeoulakos and Roberto Iniguez would testify in their capacity as her coach at club level with Nadezhda. While she has played at the FIBA Women's Basketball World Cup and the 2012 Olympics in London, she has only got one Final Round on her resume. That should change this summer as Russia surely can't ignore the deadly three-point dagger she has on her armoury, while she has also got the size and intelligence to now be a force on the defensive end as well. With Final Four experience in EuroLeague Women and time to make up for after her injuries, the reasons as to why Zhedik should be involved are plentiful.

Known for her colorful personality, infectious energy and ability to play the game in perpetual motion, Levchenko is going through a terrific learning process at club and international level. Having signed off her youth career in disappointing fashion last summer, it is her senior career which now gets the focus for the playmaker as she looks to show she can play a fulsome role if handed a debut Final Round spot. The 21-year-old is electrifying across the floor, has great vision and is now working hard to inject that extra element of control in her game which could see her morph into a renowned point guard. She seems to have flourished under Coach Mondelo at Dynamo Kursk where she is now a EuroLeague Women champion. She also showed during the Qualifiers for this tournament that she can project mature performances when needed. Levchenko came through the famous Sparta&K M.R. Vidnoje youth system and hails from one of the remotest towns in Russia, with Tynda located farther east than Mongolia. Her mother is a hair stylist so she also loves to change her own hair up a bit and has been known to go with some vivid colors.

A breathtaking teenage talent who puts a tick against everything on the list of what a rising star needs to become a top-level player, huge things are expected in the coming years of the forward. She has superb movement, quick feet and also a sweet touch and feel for the game. Her displays at youth level have been fantastic and now she is about to potentially embark on her first-ever tournament with the senior team off the back of a rookie year in EuroLeague Women. While it was a horrendous one for CCC Polkowice, it was a priceless learning curve for the keen vegetarian who showed her fine rebounding capabilities in particular. Even if Coach Vasin feels this edition of the Final Round has just come too soon, she looks like an absolute lock to play in many more in the future.

A phenomenal rebounding presence who has posted a couple of remarkable seasons in the Russian Premier League at Dynamo Moscow, Tikhonenko is now finally delivering the promise of a superb youth career with Russia. It was one that was crowned by her being named MVP at the FIBA U20 Women's European Championship 2012 and since then, she has drifted in and out of the senior set-up. She debuted at a Final Round two years ago, but has not had much of an opportunity under Coach Vasin who she worked with at Sparta&K M.R. Vidnoje. Not even named in the initial Russia squad despite a standout domestic season, she has impressed in the preparation games with her focus and work on the glass, so she might make a late run to the end of the bench. Basketball runs in her blood as her family are all involved in the sport - including her uncle and former USSR star, Valeri Tikhonenko.

A formidable physical presence who has proved a handful throughout her productive youth career which returned four medals, the Nadezhda center is slowly but surely showing she can be a force at senior level. Making the most of her size and also her unwillingness to take rash shots and focus solidly on high percentage plays, she has returned a shooting percentage of almost 50 percent in the Russian Premier League, proof of the impact she is now having. With EuroLeague Women Final Four experience to also call upon, it looks like a Final Round debut awaits. If she does get the green light, much will hinge on whether she can continue to convince on the defensive end, although the team did look strong during the Qualifiers when she was on the floor. Maiga is a huge fan of rap music and her younger brother also plays basketball at youth level.

Out to try and secure back-to-back Final Round appearances after making her debut in the previous edition, Logunova will be sweating on her place after barely featuring during the Qualifiers. Yet there is every possibility that she will be given the nod because she has been a vital role player in the rise of Dynamo Kursk which culminated in that brilliant EuroLeague Women success. The forward has shown her value in being able to jump off the bench and hold her own from a defensive standpoint and also able to play with flexibility on offense. Her versatility could be the key to unlocking a Final Round return.

A former FIBA EuroBasket Women MVP from back in 2011 when her country last stood on the top step of the podium, Kirillova continues to show her class in the Russian Premier League and EuroLeague Women with Dynamo Kursk. Although many people consider her as a deadly sniper from long-range, she demonstrated during the Qualifiers just how much of a quality combo guard she is. She led the team in assists with 4.5 per game and that was reminiscent of six years ago, when she was asked to spend much of her time propelling Russia to gold with the ball in her hands and calling the plays. Whether it is coming off the bench to take over playmaking duties or hitting a momentum-shifting triple, this experienced member of the roster remains hugely important and arrives as a EuroLeague Women champion.

Having been buried down the end of a deep bench at EuroLeague Women juggernauts UMMC Ekaterinburg for the past two years, that has worked to the advantage of Russia. They have capitalized on the modest minutes played by Cherepanova, who has brought an extra appetite and energy to the table during the Qualifiers. Playing almost 20 minutes per game, she has been the surprise find of the process and at the age of 29, she could be handed a first-ever major tournament appearance. Certainly, the two years of competing in practice every day against some of the best players in the world has pushed her own skills and the forward's clinical approach, nice shot selection and impeccable defensive rebounding will be welcomed.
