THE GAMES OF THE XVIII OLYMPIAD TOKYO 1964

The Official Report of the Organizing Committee

PREFACE

The Official Report of the Games of the XVIIIth Olympiad is now ready for publishing.

In order to ensure that all pertinent details and data for this official report, as stipulated in the Olympic Charter, would be carefully preserved, this Organizing Committee set up a sub-committee for this purpose in April 1962 some two years before the Games took place. This sub-committee included a representation from each division of the Secretariat and with the Public Relations Division (later the Press and Public Information Division) outlining the overall plan of collecting and collating the many necessary facts and details as they occurred. This sub-committee was early in 1964 reorganized to a "Report Editing Sub-Committee" to prepare for the final compilation in a form for presentation in a comprehensive report.

In the collecting of overall details of the Games preparations, cooperation was required from agencies and organizations other than the actual Organizing Committee itself and in this, we are most grateful for the assistance willingly extended by the various agencies of the National Government, the Tokyo Metropolitan Government, and the other Prefectural and City authorities involved with certain aspects or sports facilities used for the Games.

The form of this report has been divided into two main sections and these have been embodied in two separate volumes; that relating to the preparation and administration of the Games forming one part, while the remaining volume contains the complete statistical records and results of the Games themselves. In the actual arrangement of the report, the reports of past Olympic Games have provided valuable guidance, from the report in the Berlin Games in 1936 to the latest Games.

The Tokyo Games however included elements, reflecting the rapid developments in a number of fields in this space age, for which no parallel was to be found in previous Games. Scientific and mechanized apparatus appearing for the first time is given, accordingly, rather more space than it would otherwise have warranted in a volume as limited as in this report. Mindful of the historical and practical usefulness that this report will have for those organizing Olympic Games in the future, we have endeavoured to include the complete story—from the very earliest invitation to be named a host city, to the last act of the Committee on completion of the Games. To include a full text of explanation for all these details would involve a much greater number of pages than could be reasonably included. We have to some extent overcome this by including a number of diagrams and tables, and where possible illustrated the text with actual photographs. A large number of photos in colour have been selected, in spite of the additional cost involved, for not only do they impart a beauty to this volume but they also enable the depicting in exact detail a true impression of the Games, from the scale of the National Stadium during the Opening Ceremony, to the faithful reproduction in their actual colours of the various badges and printed materials made use of.

The actual records and results of the Games themselves have been collated in great detail and these have been included with only minimum abbreviation or condensation under the relevant headings for each sport.

Such an ambitious undertaking could not have been completed without the cooperation and assistance of the many sections and groups concerned. A large number of the photographs here reproduced have been offered for this purpose by newspapers or press organizations in Japan. To all these who assisted us and rendered such wholehearted support, our most sincere thanks.

The Organizing Committee for the Games of the XVIII Olympiad

In this volume the Organizing Committee for the Games of XVIII Olympiad records the performances of the participants, the accomplishments of the champions, and the story of the preparations which assured the phenomenal success of this great festival of the youth of the world. It is not from these cold figures and colourless statistics, however, that you will discover the most important aspects of this wonderful event, the features that made it so outstanding. It is impossible for mere numbers to give the reader an adequate impression of the friendly reception and gracious hospitality given to all contestants, officials and spectators alike, by our Japanese hosts and that means all Japanese, and not only those connected with the event, since the entire nation from newsboy to industrial tycoon adopted the Games as his own project and went out of his way to please the visitors. The Olympic flame on its way from ancient Olympia was carried through every province in Japan and no country has ever been so thoroughly converted to the Olympic movement.

This cordial welcome and the true Olympic spirit which prevailed throughout, together with the superior facilities and the meticulous organization, certainly was a stimulation to the competitors and undoubtedly contributed to their sensational performances. Every operation had been rehearsed repeatedly until it moved smoothly, effortlessly and with precision. Every difficulty had been anticipated and the result was as near perfection as possible. Even the most callous journalists were impressed, to the extent that one veteran reporter named them the "Happy" Games.

This common interest served to submerge political, economic and social differences and to provide an objective shared by all the people of Japan. In Tokyo everyone united to clean, brighten and improve the city and a vast program of public works involving hundreds of millions of dollars was adopted. It remains a much more beautiful and efficient municipality with the handsome sport facilities erected for the Games as permanent civic assets. Kenzo Tange's Gymnasium received a special award from the International Olympic Committee and is certainly one of the finest sports buildings in all the world.

The fine arts program was outstanding. Elaborate exhibitions of the National Treasures of the country were arranged in all museums. Grand Opera with Japanese actors and singers was produced. There were outstanding performances in the Kabuki and Noh theatres. Demonstrations of flower arrangement and the traditional tea ceremony were given and visitors had every opportunity to become acquainted with all the subtle facets of Japanese culture.

The success of this enterprise provided a tremendous stimulus to the morale of the entire country. Japan has demonstrated its capacity to all the world through bringing this greatest of all international spectacles to Asia for the first time and staging it with such unsurpassed precision and distinction. It is certainly the Number One Olympic Nation today. The International Olympic Committee is indebted to it for this important contribution to the Olympic Movement.

Olympic Sports Operations Organizations

Hydraulic chutes:

Two systems

Judge section—Press section—Photo finish apparatus room

Installation for watering the track: 8 systems, 155 places, automatic

Auxiliary facilities:— Offices for officials, conference rooms, waiting rooms for athletes, locker rooms for athletes (five each for men and women), a gymnasium, a swimming pool, a lecture hall, museum, a clinic, study rooms, offices for clerks, broadcasting and telecasting booths, accommodation, dining rooms and tea rooms.

Additional Installation:—

Broadcasting equipment: (care was given to acoustic problems)

Elevators: 2

Cauldron and stand for the Sacred Olympic

Fire: 2.1 metres (diameter)X2.1 metres (height) fired by propane gas

Construction period:—

First period January, 1957—March, 1958

Second period March, 1962—August, 1963

Design:— Kanto District Bureau of the Construction Ministry

Builder:— Taisei Construction Company

Efforts were made initially to expand the stadium to house a capacity of 100,000. However, this was later for practical reasons limited to about 75,000 by the size of the available area and the existing facilities. The crescent-shaped stadium was decided on from a number viewpoints, including the aesthetic appearance, and thus additional facilities were added to the back bleachers.

In order to give the track adequate elasticity and hardness, various kinds of materials were thoroughly tested before deciding on the neo-H-brick coloured cinders. The lawn for the centre field was chosen, after exhaustive studies of various kinds of lawn for several years, the turf chosen consisted of several varieties of lawn available in Japan. This same turf also was used at other games sites.

Prince Chichibu Memorial Football Field Background:— Having been used as a rugby field for many years, this field was adapted as one of the five football fields necessary for the Olympic Games.

Located inside the Outer Garden of the Meiji Shrine, the Gakushuin School for Girls occupied this site before the war. The foundations of the school still remain buried under the grounds, obstructing adequate draining. The lot is 3.4 hectares in area.

The distance between the field and the Yoyogi Olympic Village is approximately the same as for the National Stadium.

Stand:— Number of seats: 17,569 Size:—

Building space: 10,015 sq. metres

Ground: 11,000 sq. metres, Stand: 8,350 sq. metres, Measurements: 150 metresX80 metres

Structure of floor:— Main bleachers: Ferroconcrete; steel-framed roof; earth bleachers; single-story in all parts

Sports facilities:—

Field: 70 metresX100 metres, covered with "Hime-Korai" lawn turf. Foraminus fume tubes buried underground for drainage.

Auxiliary facilities: Warming-up grounds, club house

Construction schedule:—

First period 1951— 1964

Second period December, 1963—August, 1964

Design:— Kanto District Bureau of the Construction Ministry (extension work)

Builder:— Hazama-gumi Company (extension work)

Efforts were made to encourage the even growth of the turf at this field and the National Stadium by installing the drainage system under the ground in addition to the one on the surface.

The main stands were expanded to increase the capacity.

Tokyo Metropolitan Gymnasium Background:— The Tokyo Metropolitan Gymnasium was constructed for the 1954 World Wrestling Championship Meet held in Tokyo. Having also served as an important indoor game site in the Third Asian Games, the gymnasium then was used for the basket-ball games. At the time of the Olympic Games, however, the gymnasium was used for gymnastics, and for this reason, a small gymnasium was added to the original building.

This building is on the former site of the residence of Prince Tokugawa is used as the lot. The Tokyo Metropolitan Indoor Swimming Pool and the Tokyo Metropolitan Track and Field with a 300-metre track (sub-tracks of the National Stadium) are included in the area, and it is directly connected with the National Stadium by land-bridges. Extending over a total area of 4.8 hectares, it is located facing the hilly regions where the National Stadium stands. The low land created by the Shibuya River is sandwiched between these two hilly regions.

Stand:— Total number of seats: 6,474 (including 1,208 temporarily built bleachers)

Size:—

Total floor space: 12,287 sq. metres

Arena: 2,640 sq. metres (66 metresX40 metres)
 Auxiliary gymnasium: 660 sq. metres (36 metresX18.5 metres)
 Structure, Height:— Ferroconcrete, partly steel-framed; Four stories above the ground,
 Sports facilities:
 66 metresX40 metres DEX-O-TEX (compound of cork-dust and synthetic rubber) 2.5 centimetre thick
 Small Gymnasium 36 metresX18.5 metres
 Installations:— Various kinds of fixtures and apparatus used in gymnastics
 Lighting—the average illumination of 1,300 luxes
 Electricity operated score recording apparatus
 Other facilities:— Locker rooms for athletes (eight), clinic, offices for officials and clerks
 Construction period:— January, 1963—May, 1964
 Design:— Construction Bureau of the Tokyo Metropolitan Government
 Builder:— Kida Construction Company.

The small gymnasium was constructed close by the main gymnasium as a place for warming-up. As the floor was not made of wood, wooden panels were placed on the floor.

Tokyo Metropolitan Indoor Swimming Pool

Background:— This pool was built as a main swimming pool for the Third Asian Games and is close to the Tokyo Metropolitan Gymnasium. Having been designed for use in all of the four seasons of the year, many new devices are incorporated to maintain the water temperature and the room temperature, while efforts have been made to alleviate the acoustic problems which an indoor swimming pool presents. At the time of the Olympic Games, this indoor swimming pool was used for water-polo games.

Stand:— Total number of seats: 3,014, including temporarily expected seats

Size:—

Total floor space: 13,416 sq. metres

Arena: 50 metresX20 metres racing pool with nine courses, 25 metresX20 metres diving pool with a 10-metre high springboard.

Structure of floor:— Steel-flamed, ferroconcrete, three stories

Attached facilities and installations:— Offices for officials, waiting room with heating facilities for athletes, locker room, clinic and machine room.

Lighting: average illumination of 600 luxes; 201 400-W mercury lamps

Underwater lighting: 37 400-W mercury lamps

Large stop-clock indicating records

As the shallow parts of the pool did not provide sufficient depth for the water-polo games, this shortcoming was overcome by raising the water surface of the pool.

National Gymnasium Background:— It was considered best to hold swimming races at an indoor pool as the Olympic Games were being held in the autumn when the temperature was comparatively low. From this viewpoint, as well as from the expected number of spectators—swimming races being very popular events in Japan—plans at first were made to construct a large indoor swimming pool with a capacity of accommodating about 25,000 spectators.

And the National Stadium had been initially constructed as a memorial building to the Third Asian Games, it was planned to construct the indoor swimming pool as a memorial building of the Tokyo Olympic Games. It was also hoped that the facilities would be used permanently as a multi-purpose indoor gymnasium, instead of merely as a swimming pool. Taking all these points into consideration, plans were advanced for a multi-purpose indoor gymnasium. It soon became clear however that it would not be feasible to construct a building accommodating as many as 25,000 spectators as originally planned, and it was accordingly decided to proceed with plans for the construction of a multi-purpose gymnasium to accommodate spectators somewhat in excess of 10,000.

The site of the gymnasium had been known as the Yoyogi field. After the war, the field was used by the US army as residential areas for dependent housing.

This Yoyogi district was studied along with other possible sites as a site for the indoor swimming pool, and was selected as the most suitable place for the pool. The majority of the residential buildings used by the US Forces personnel were adapted as dormitories for the athletes in the Main Olympic Village. The houses in the area on which the gymnasium was to stand were torn down.

This site is located at a very convenient point from the standpoint of transportation, being close to a railroad station, as well as to the principal and auxiliary roads. The land on which the main gymnasium and its annex were constructed covers a total area of 9.1 hectares.

Stand— Total number of seats: 11,112

National Gymnasium (Main Building)

(Annex)

Installations:— Heating and filtering installations for the pools; Ice-making apparatus
Lighting: Average illumination of 800 luxes. At starting lines, 1,500 luxes (average lux at the time of the Olympic Games 1,200, and at starting lines at the time of the Olympic Games, 2,000 luxes).

Automatic clocks; Electrically-operated scoreboard;

Other facilities:— Offices for officials, conference rooms, control room, locker rooms, waiting rooms, guest rooms, press locker rooms at the pool for training, dining rooms, tea rooms.

As the gymnasium was to be made available to the public in the future (as swimming pools in summer and as an ice-skating rink in winter), the gymnasium was also provided with ticket offices, locker rooms and rooms from where skates could be rented.

Other Installations:— Heating and Ventilating installations, air conditioning installations (annexed rooms only); Closed circuit broadcasting equipment; Independent power plant;

Construction schedule:— February, 1963— August, 1964

Design:— Prof. K. Tange & Arctec. Team, Urbanists & Architects, Prof. Y. Tsuboi & Assocs., Structural engineers, Prof. U. Inoue & Assocs., Mechanical engineers.

Builder:— Shimizu Construction Company

Efforts were made to design a complex which covered, most efficiently from the standpoints of both function and economy, the space of about 50 metres by 100 metres in area and also accommodation for 15,000 seats. The question of balance was duly considered as the whole district was to be included, together with the Inner Garden of the Meiji Shrine, in a huge forest park to be constructed after the Yoyogi Village was eventually removed.

After considering all relevant factors the level space was divided into crescent-shaped units, while a suspension roof was adopted from the viewpoints of requirements of space, as well as of economical construction. In order to create the restful atmosphere and the feeling of freedom, garden corridors were constructed on different levels along the exterior part of the building.

Although all requirements for the parking lots could not be fulfilled by reason of the area available, minimum necessities were secured.

The problem of lighting, air-conditioning or acoustics were admirably solved in the context of the special structural feature of this building. Good heating efficiency was obtained because of the relatively small air capacity resulting from the structure of the crescent-shaped roof. In order to maintain constant light, use of the lighting system was desirable at all times. But in order to avoid such uneconomical use of the lighting system, natural lighting equipment was devised through the roof-supporting cables.

National Gymnasium Annex The annex was constructed on the same area as the swimming pool in order to provide a gymnasium not included in the other plan. As basketball games were to be held here, outdoor courts for training were built for temporary use. It was so planned as to be adaptable later to other purposes, such as conventions.

Stand:— Total number of seats: 3,929

Area, Scope:—

Ground floor space: 3,144 sq. metres
Total floor space: 5,591 sq. metres
Court space: 1,287 sq. metres
(circle with a diameter of 40.5 metres)
Heights of eaves: 13.185 metres
Pillars: 42.29 metres

Structure and floor:— Ferroconcrete; roof, suspended from the panels supported by cables running in the opposite directions.

Facilities:— Offices for officials, locker rooms, guest rooms, offices for clerks and dining rooms

Attached installations:— Lighting: Average illumination 800 luxes (1,100 lux at the time of the Olympic Games) Air conditioning installations (only for bleachers) Various bulleting boards, clocks and closed circuit broadcasting equipment

Construction period and Designers:— Same as the National Stadium

Builder:— Obayashi-gumi Company.

The number of seats for spectators was limited to 4,000 taking into consideration the expected need in the future. A part of the outdoor parking lot was remodeled into an open-air court for training by installing lighting equipment. For the maintenance and management of the annex, the facilities and equipment at the main building were used.

Shibuya Public Hall Background:— It is initially thought desirable in the case of weightlifting events that the stage on which the event held were viewed from three directions, an amphitheatre-type structure. With its future use in mind, however the hall was designed on the same architectural principles of a regular theatre.

The Shibuya Ward had plans to construct a complex of ward offices and a public hall, these overall plans were made use of.

The land area extended over a total area of 1.26 hectares with parking lots constructed underground.

Stand:— Total number of seats: 2,222

Size:—

Building area: 2,314 sq. metres
Total floor space: 8,151 sq. metres
Stage space: 255 sq. metres

Structure and floor:— Ferroconcrete; four floors above the ground, one below

Attached facilities:— Stage (revolving stage):

Dressing rooms and dining rooms

An auxiliary training hall: 15 metres by 13 metres—was set up at a place directly connected with the stage, where the platform for performance was placed. About 50 temporary locker rooms were provided by using one part of the ward office space. Offices for officials also were set up using another area of the ward office space.

Attached installations:— Stage lighting equipment. Projection equipment. An independent power plant Scoreboards.

Constructed period:— April, 1963—March, 1964. Construction of the parts related to the Olympic Games was mostly completed by September, 1964, and construction of the remaining overall building plan was resumed after the Olympic Games.

Design:— Architectural Mode Institute.

Builder:— Kajima Construction Company.

Komazawa Stadium (Track and Field) Background:— Constructed in the Komazawa Sports Park (42 hectares), it is similar to the National Stadium in its facilities, only smaller in size. It was to function as a venue for athletic event in Tokyo, as well as serve as a venue for events other than sports events or gatherings. Football games were held at this stadium during the Olympic Games.

Bleachers are constructed on the side facing the Central Plaza of the park, while the bleachers on the back side of the stadium are directly connected with the roads around the park. The central control centre for various games sites and facilities are located in the stadium.

Stand:— Total number of seats: 20,784. Seats reserved for distinguished visitors: 20. Special seats: 120. Press seats: 152.
